Should dogs be banned from beach?

By MICHAEL GARDNER

HAS THE time come to ban dogs from Carmel Beach or to extend the leash law to encompass the entire city?

The much-debated question has been posed to the Carmel City Council every even year this decade and 1984 is no exception.

In 1980 and again in 1982 the council rejected a proposal to extend the leash law to the residential district of the city. Dogs must be on a leash in the commercial district and under "voice command" in the residential zones.

Dogs are banned from Devendorf Park, but are allowed in Forest Hill Park, Mission Trail Park and at Carmel Beach.

The latest attempt to place more controls on dogs in the city has come from resident Carolina Bayne in meetings with the Carmel Beach Rehabilitation Task Force and the city council.

Mrs. Bayne has expressed concern that many people simply do not clean up after their dogs. And the messes create an unsightly health problem.

Mrs. Bayne added that she can no longer allow her grandchildren to play at the beach for fear of what they may find in the sand. And roaming dogs on the beach also jump on children, she said.

She is supported by Dr. Robert Pettit, who outlined the health problems caused by dog feces during the Aug. 7 city council meeting.

At that meeting the council indicated it would prefer to increase enforcement and try to make dog owners more aware of the problems before taking further steps to extend the leash law or ban dogs from the beach.

So far there is no indication that the issue will be further addressed by the council at its next regular meeting Sept. 4.

The council did ask that efforts be stepped up to enforce more strictly the "pooper-scooper" and leash laws.

Most of this kind of law enforcement is the responsibility of the animal control officer. However, new horse patrolwoman Jan Yost is expected to help especially with the problems of dogs defecating on the beach.

And dog owners need to be informed that if the leash law and pooper-scooper ordinance violations continue, more drastic measures should be taken.

Those steps could include extension of the leash law to the residential district, including the beach. Or the council may decide to ban dogs from the beach.

ROBERT STEPHENSON is one of the more outspoken council members in favor of more controls on dogs.

"In the beginning I think we need more stricter enforcement of the leash laws. In other words, no free-roaming dogs," he told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook last week.

Stephenson favors a leash law extension to include the residential zones and the beach. "I've never had much faith in the voice command," he said.

If stricter enforcement does not solve the problems, then "the next step is a complete ban on dogs from the beach," he said.

Stephenson does not think more controls would punish the majority for the irresponsibility of a few dog owners.

"If you want to protect the majority you should ban the dogs from the beach so the majority can enjoy the beach without fear of canine pollution."

Dogs that are so large that they need room to run don't belong in the city anyway, Stephenson contends.

"If the dog is so large it has to be exercised on the street and on the beach then it shouldn't be kept in an urban area," he said.

Councilman David Maradei cannot see the day when dogs will be banned from the beach. But he does think the council may be forced to extend the leash law to the beach.

"There is no way you can practically enforce a dog ban on the beach. It is not consistent with the basic concepts and traditions of Carmel," he said.

Maradei said he thinks the solution lies in a combination of peer pressure, more police enforcement and making dog owners aware of their responsibilities to keep their pets under control and clean up after them.

If this does not work then "the end result will be a leash law on the beach," he said.

"If you love Carmel and if you respect your neighbors, you're going to have the common courtesy to clean up after your dogs," he said.

But Maradei admitted any change in the leash law will not be one without controversy.

"Every time we talk about dogs it becomes very emotional," he said. "It is not an issue that breeds goodwill in the community."

Councilwoman Helen Arnold wants to see if more enforcement will work before the council imposes more restrictions.

"I'd like to see some more enforcement of the scooper law. If we issued a few more citations people would become more responsible. Nobody has bothered to enforce it," she said.

CARMEL ARTIST Barclay Ferguson and his dogs on leashes are fixtures at Carmel Beach. The Carmel City Council is mulling a proposal to require dogs to be leashed while on the beach. Or, the council may even ban dogs from the beach. (Michael Gardner photo.)

Asked if she favors extension of the leash law, Mrs. Arnold replied: "I'd be reluctant to do that until we enforce the laws we have."

Mayor Charlotte Townsend said the dog control problem is a "recurring theme...It's something that should be re-examined from time to time."

The mayor pointed out that it is the few "careless and thoughtless owners that are jeopardizing the rights of other people. The thoughtless people are threatening the freedom of all dogs by being thoughtless."

The mayor, too, supports the need for more enforcement.

"I do hope that we can begin to put people on notice by enforcing the scooper law," she said.

Councilman Jim Wright did not return Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook telephone calls. However, at the Aug. 7 council meeting Wright pointed out that Lake Tahoe has successfully banned dogs from its shores.

Wright too supported more enforcement before taking any further action.

Twisted Carmel planning

Dear Editor:

Must the radiant beauty of coral be submerged in a sea of drab beige?

What quixotic ire has twisted the planners in Carmel's wonderland-by-the-sea?

Perhaps the new La Playa was remiss. Perhaps the planners were not mollified sufficiently, or given rose-colored glasses for their color-blind eyes.

But is that justification for an inordinate penalty, costing bundles? Namely, the order to repaint La Playa, or else.

Is beige really better than coral?

Is pettifoggery the arbiter of taste?

Wait 'til Time gets wind of this. They'll have a ball.

Thanks for flowers

Dear Editor:

I want to thank Bill Lange of the Carmel Forestry Department for planting such wonderful flowers at different locations around Carmel this year. He may have been responsible for the flowers every year, but I never remember enjoying them as much as I have lately.

In front of the building and planning department there sprouted a crop of beautiful multi-colored toadflax a couple of months ago. I enjoyed them every day, many times, as I came and went from my office.

As they began to wane, up came a large crop of godetia. They are in full bloom now, and are just beautiful. I have seen other planting that he has done this year, at Sunset Center, and on assorted road dividers in town. All are lovely.

I think Bill is an artist in flower planting; in his timing (so one crop replaces another) and in the flowers he chooses. Thank you, Bill!

What about dish?

Dear Editor:

Last September, the COMSAT Corporation presented a plan to the Monterey County Planning Commission requesting a major expansion of the satellite facility near Jamesburg in the Cachagua area of upper Carmel Valley. Due to opposition by the local residents who live near the "Big Dish," the county properly required COMSAT to fund an environmental impact report (EIR). That EIR is now being prepared.

As soon as that EIR is completed and sent to the county, we can expect COMSAT to again press for permission to add two additional 90-foot large dish antennas and up to six slightly smaller ones as well as to at least double the size of the huge building.

As a resident of this area, I am deeply concerned that the COMSAT expansion will completely destroy the rural, tranquil nature of the Cachagua. None of the land here is zoned industrial, yet the COMSAT facility is a very industrial type of installation. It is completely fenced, has security lights at night and is patrolled by guards with guard dogs.

Would not such a site which is very important to the federal government better be located on federal property where it could be better secured against sabotage?

If the huge construction project is allowed, residents of the entire Carmel Valley will have to endure heavy truck traffic for months on end.

As this project affects the entire county, I appeal to all the candidates for county supervisor to come forth at this time and state their positions on this vital subject.

Favors postal boxes

Dear Editor:

Since opinions on the Carmel Post Office box service appear to be in order, let me say that my vote unquestionably goes to the box system over individual delivery.

Some of my friends in other states have rented postal boxes recently because they consider it safer than letters left in outside boxes.

Our Post Office is a very pleasant meeting place, where residents exchange greetings and enjoy seeing familiar faces. Like our library, it provides a friendly atmosphere which enhances our days. It is an important part of Carmel tradition.

Those who do not value it have a variety of individual alternate arrangements for getting their mail to them. I am so grateful for our Post Office and for our very special library and its staff.

Wants mail delivery

Dear Editor:

I disagree with Rosalind Sharpe Wall (Pine Cone/Outlook July 19) in regard to mail delivery.

I think if she were to poll the population here, she would find most of us would much rather have our mail delivered.

Although I'm not a senior I have lived in Carmel all my life, and love living here but I dislike fighting traffic and looking for a place to park, just to get bills. Frankly, I cannot understand why we don't have mail delivery just because a few people dislike having numbers on their homes.

There are only two unpaved streets in Carmel and so few houses on them, I can't see what difference that would make.

Since your paper is read by everyone in Carmel, how about taking a poll, or let's put the issue on the next election.

Plus ca change

Dear Editor:

The French have a saying: "The more things change, the more they remain the same." Ah, Carmel!

In July 1972, my husband and I subscribed to the Pine Cone after having bought a house in the area. The headlined items were the following:

- The Hatton Canyon Freeway — construction just around the corner.
- The new dam — just around the corner because of

- The development of the Valley.
- The problems on Scenic Drive.

In the summer of 1984 I have seen headlines about the following:

- The Hatton Canyon Freeway. (Can anyone who has driven between Rio Road and Carpenter Street truly doubt it is needed?)

- The new dam. (I see my friend, Ed Lee, has resigned from the water management board over it. Can anyone who lived through the drought, and still brushes his teeth with the water turned off, doubt that it is needed?)

- The development of the Valley. (First it was Carmel Valley Ranch with its still-kept secret water supply; now it is Rancho San Carlos.)

- The problems on Scenic Drive — nothing much new there, either.

With all of this going on, I felt like a rat deserting a sinking ship when I left the peninsula forever last year.

But now, with the advantages of time and distance perspective, I see what the charm of the area is. It is not, as I had thought, the incredible scenery, the special weather or the

Promising changes at Carmel High School

WHATEVER the shortcomings of the past, public education in general and the Carmel Unified School District in particular have set a course toward more discipline and emphasis on learning.

Nowhere is this new direction more apparent than at Carmel High School, where a "closed" campus will be instituted in the fall and where a system of rewards and punishments has been instituted to reinforce good behavior by students.

Under the new marching orders, students will be required to stay on campus for the duration of the school day and may not leave at lunch time except for emergencies, doctors' appointments, or pressing family business.

The closed campus system will be coupled with a tightened attendance policy intended to guarantee that students are in class when they are supposed to be. Other measures will deal severely with students caught with drugs or alcohol on campus. And a renewed emphasis will be placed on academics and support for classroom instruction.

In recent years, students at Carmel High School have performed better than average on standardized state achievement tests, and the percentage of students who enroll in colleges is very high.

So in some ways, the national trend of the last decade toward more emphasis on traditional education has been anticipated in the Carmel Unified School District. But not all of the permissiveness spawned in the let-it-all-hang-out era of public education has yet been arrested.

Thus it is reassuring to see the new measures which will be effected at Carmel High School, along with an extensive physical remodeling. They should make an already-good educational facility even better.

people; rather it is that "things remain the same." I imagine that in the year 2000 these same four items will be in the headlines, and life will continue to go on.

I love it.

Voting for Reagan

Dear Editor:

Was it good news that Anne Burford, as reported recently, had withdrawn from her appointment as chairwoman of the National Advisory Committee on Ocean and Atmosphere?

The good I can find in it is personal. This issue has saved me a lot of thought and time listening to presidential campaign rhetoric during the next several months. I now know for whom I shall vote in November.

The virtues which characterize civilized behavior — courage, honesty, loyalty, compassion, a sense of justice — have all fallen on hard times in our era. Politicians, particularly, are prone to hypocritical pragmatism, promising or doing virtually anything to garner the winning vote.

As head of the EPA, Mrs. Burford was portrayed as a veritable Medusa, capable of and allegedly having indeed perpetuated every environmental sin imaginable. She was finally hounded into resigning. A subsequent impartial investigation exonerated her completely of all wrongdoing. Nevertheless, continued harassment by the establishment Left has made her a pariah.

President Reagan behaved in a thoroughly unpolitical way by naming Mrs. Burford to a new post. He knew full well that it would cost him votes in November. But he also knew the "right" thing, the civilized thing to do.

Is this too trivial a reason for me to decide to vote for President Reagan? I submit that the difference between right and wrong is not trivial.

'No traffic problem'

Dear Editor:

I don't know what all the fuss about a "traffic problem in Carmel" is about. One person wants to have the mail delivered to the houses in Carmel to eliminate the hundreds of car trips a week it takes to pick up mail.

Another wants to keep Carmel "unique" and not change a thing. There's talk about building multi-level parking at Sunset. I personally don't see a thing wrong about the traffic snarl by the post office and trucks double parking on downtown streets.

I don't even mind the bewildered tourist creeping around the block for the fifth time looking for a parking space. I never have parking problems. I don't mind the trucks stopped in the street. As far as I'm concerned, there's no traffic problem in Carmel. But then I always come into town on my motorcycle.

Public trust betrayed

Dear Editor:

The environmentally concerned residents of Monterey County must organize and regain control of our local politicians because we are not being represented by these pseudo-representatives. They have betrayed the public trust by using their public office for their own personal gain and to show favoritism to developer interests such as the Granite Destruction conspiracy.

These "special" groups have manipulated our local and state politicians to gain the upper hand and they are now dictating our future so that we cannot have any say in their development plans. We need to get rid of the local, county and state politicians who use the words of "environmentalism" to gain public office, only to resort to treacherous intrigues which permit the construction of the big ugly hotels and the destruction of our coastal mountains in Big Sur, like Pico Blanco.

The company which is destroying the Big Sur mountains is the same company which is running our communities with the giant concrete hotels. They use the limestone of Pico Blanco and the sand from the dunes of Del Monte Beach to make the concrete which dominates our lives.

We need legislation which will protect our coastal dunes from the mining operations which steal the sand from the beaches to make all of that concrete for the hotels. This is election time and all of the developer-politicians are trying to gain the support of the environmentalists by bragging about their "environmental" legislation.

Do not trust them.

Carmel High students to face new policies at remodeled facility

By MICHAEL GARDNER

WHEN Carmel High School students return to classes Sept. 5 they will see more changes than just a remodeled campus.

The 1984-85 school year at Carmel High will usher in a series of new campus-wide policies bound by a common thread — to make students aware that their job is to learn and that misbehavior will not be tolerated.

The Carmel Unified School District Board of Education — Robert Fenton, Pat Con-dren, Jim Yates, Doyle Clayton and Susan Bromfield — spent much of early 1984 developing policy changes that reflect their philosophy that high expectations produce better results.

Results of the efforts by the school board already can be measured before classes have started. Whereas high school attendance over the years has declined steadily, this year there is a marked increase in enrollment.

Supt. William Rand had projected an enrollment of 803 this fall. The latest count showed about 850 students registered for classes.

About half of these students are new to the district. But another 25 are counted as transfers from other schools, both public and private.

PRINCIPAL Marsha Kading-Kelly will oversee the implementation of many changes at Carmel High School this fall, including a closed campus, new attendance policies and a stricter code of conduct. (Michael Gardner photo.)

This pleases the district, which has steadily lost enrollment to the private schools because some parents perceive public education as a poor second to the private Robert Louis Stevenson, York or Santa Catalina schools.

This year instead of losing students to private schools the high school is getting them back.

In an interview with the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook, Carmel High School Principal Marsha Kading-Kelly talked about the changes students will see when they return to campus Sept. 5.

The principal describes the upcoming school year as "a renewed dedication to excellence where students can reach their maximum potential. I don't think any of us know just how good we can be. I think we should strive to find out."

'There will be more emphasis on helping teachers understand college requirements, and how classes relate to careers. We want to make the liaison between classroom and career more obvious.'

One of the first major decisions by trustees also was one of the most controversial — the closed campus.

Students will not be allowed to leave campus at lunch unless they have a doctor's appointment, an emergency or must attend to family business, Mrs. Kading-Kelly said.

"We expect students to stay on campus the entire day. There will not be any physical obstacles. There will not be a gate or a guard checking the parking lot," she said.

DURING THE first week volunteer parents and administrators will be on hand to keep students on campus.

But after that initial week, the closed campus probably will be enforced on an honor system, Mrs. Kading-Kelly said.

"I think the students will comply because that's their past history. They'll be good about following the rule," she said.

STUDENTS NO longer will be able to leave the Carmel High School campus at lunch time this fall. The school board closed campus policy goes into effect the first day of school Sept. 5. Above, a couple of students on their way back to school last spring got caught in the middle of Highway 1 when the light turned green. (Michael Gardner photo.)

However, there will be penalties for those who sneak off campus.

The first time a student is caught will result in a three-day suspension or a Saturday study session.

The second offense will result in a five-day suspension or two Saturday study sessions. And the third time, a student is suspended for five days and removed from school.

One of the reasons why the campus was kept open in the past is that there was no place for students to eat.

On rainy days, students had to cluster in the hallways or rely on teachers who kept their rooms open because the cafeteria room was used as physical education class space.

But the cafeteria dining room has been refurbished and a new serving line installed as part of the campus-wide $700,000 remodeling project.

To help make life on campus at lunch a little easier, the cafeteria also will have a stereo system.

The food service system has undergone some changes. The service line will greatly reduce waiting time for lunch, which is important since the break is only about 30 minutes.

In addition, the menu has been changed to include the foods that students enjoy most, such as submarine sandwiches and a daily salad bar.

The leadership class is expected to establish a student-run activities commission. The commission will help develop lunchtime events, such as bands and guest speakers.

The campus also has about 20 clubs and organizations that will meet regularly at lunch.

The remodeling project is on schedule and most work will be completed by the time classes begin, Mrs. Kading-Kelly predicted.

"I think it's going really well. It's going to be pretty close. It looks to me like the finishing touches just need to be done," she said.

Some work will be done during the school year, however. Most of that will be paving and landscaping, she said.

NOT ALL of the changes students will see are physical.

A couple of new policy changes will crack down on student behavior and truancy.

The first is a new attendance policy that is designed to insure that students are in class.

An unexcused absence will immediately result in a suspension and student-parent-staff conference. Other unexcused absences lead to longer suspensions and possible removal from the school.

"Attendance is very important and students have to realize that there are very severe consequences for missing classes.

"If there are students who cannot or will not attend, we'll help them find an alternative means of education," Mrs. Kading-Kelly said.

The usual result is that students are transferred to the more independent, study-oriented Carmel Valley High School.

Trustees also have under consideration a plan to modify the code of conduct policy.

'We expect students to stay on campus the entire day. There will not be any physical obstacles. There will not be a gate or a guard checking the parking lot.'

The plan is to make the penalty swift for the possession of drugs or alcohol.

The first time a student is caught on campus or at a school activity with drugs or alcohol, he will be removed from school and placed in "an alternative means of education," Mrs. Kading-Kelly said.

"There's no excuse for it at all," she said.

Cigarette smoking out of the designated area between the cafeteria and gym will result in immediate suspension. Previously, the guilty student only was assigned to a clean up detail.

The school board Aug. 20 also received a report on the progress of the Peer School Excellence Project, which is designed to reassess the high school program and make policy changes to meet new curriculum goals.

The "thrills" of the project will be in several different areas, Mrs. Kading-Kelly explained.

One area being worked on is "to make supporting the classroom the primary importance of the administration. From that comes

Clint Eastwood hits snag with Carmel planning unit

A DIVIDED Carmel Planning Commission Aug. 15 rejected another try by actor Clint Eastwood to build a two-story retail and office complex downtown.

However, commissioners did allow architect George Brook-Kothlow, who represents Eastwood, to build a detailed model of the project and street frontage for presentation in September.

Brook-Kothlow now has two choices: build the model and wait until September, or appeal the decision to the city council.

Brook-Kothlow proposes a two-story U-shaped building that would be constructed adjacent to Eastwood's Hog's Breath Inn, west side of San Carlos Street between Sixth and Fifth avenues. The existing Shell Fisher's Gallery building and Nishi Nursery would be demolished.

The Eastwood project is another long-delayed project that has been before the city for more than a year.

The planning commission narrowly approved the project in February on a 4-3 vote. However, Council members David Maradei and Helen Arnold successfully appealed that approval to the full council.

Brook-Kothlow then was to alter plans, which he did by lowering the height by one and one-half feet.

Brook-Kothlow's lowered height divided the commission just as the original application did.

Absent Commissioner John Logan wrote a letter critical of the project. "You will not be looking at anything new," said his letter.

Logan called the lowered height a "trivial" change and added that the building would be "attractive if built in Copenhagen," Denmark.

Chairwoman Sandy Swain added that the commission should quickly reject the proposal without hearing Brook-Kothlow's presentation "unless there are some new thoughts from the commission."

"I don't think we should beat it to death," Ms. Swain added.

Commissioner Gene Cava said he believes the council simply would reject the proposal again even if planners approved it.

"I'm not going to oppose the council. I'm advisory to the council. I'm not going to overrule them," he said.

The two architects on the commission, Richard Barrett and Fred McNulty, praised the plan.

"I think it's a work of architecture. I just would hate to see the design compromised," Barrett said.

McNulty said it would be a "tragedy" to turn down the project, which he called a "great building...obviously superior to the mediocre" neighboring structures.

A motion to deny the project failed on a 3-3 vote. A second motion to approve the plan failed on the same tie vote. Ms. Swain, Cava and Gene Hammond voted against the project while Art Mertens, McNulty and Barrett supported the proposal.

Commissioners, at the suggestion of McNulty, then continued the item until September so Brook-Kothlow could develop a specific model for the project.

Decision Aug. 29 on Sur logging

A DECISION is expected Wednesday, Aug. 29, by a regional California Department of Forestry official on an amended plan by the Scarborough Lumber Co. of Scotts Valley to log 80 acres of redwoods in the Limekiln Creek area of Big Sur.

A temporary restraining order issued in June by Monterey County Superior Court Judge Richard Silver blocks logging of the originally-approved 35 acres until further hearings in September.

David Soho, regional resource manager for the forestry department in Monterey, conducted a public hearing on the expanded Scarborough application Aug. 16.

Soho is to render his decision on the permit Aug. 29 after he has received comments from officials of the state forestry, fish and game, and parks and recreation departments, as well as the California Regional Water Quality Control Board, the Coastal Commission and Monterey County.

Camaldolese Monks from the Immaculate Heart Hermitage in Big Sur — who sued with Monterey County to stop the logging — protested the amended logging plan at the public hearing. The monks reiterated concerns that the logging operation would disturb their serenity, threaten ancient redwood stands and pose traffic problems on access roads.

Zad Leavy of Big Sur, attorney for the monks, presented a petition with about 500 signatures of county residents who oppose the proposed logging. Leavy said he has been unable to obtain precise estimates from Scarborough Lumber of how many trees of what species would be harvested, if the application is approved.

Decision expected soon on library annex

By MICHAEL GARDNER

DECISION TIME for the proposed annex to Harrison Memorial Library appears to be near.

Plans for an annex directly on Lincoln Street between Ocean and Sixth avenues are to be presented to the library board of trustees when it meets at 4 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 28 at city hall.

Architect Don Goodhue will outline his proposal for a $1.2 million annex, which has been sought by the city for years to help alleviate the overcrowding at the main library, northeast corner of Ocean Avenue and Lincoln Street.

The plans were unavailable by press deadline. However, the plans are expected to include an analysis of how to attach the annex and make it architecturally compatible with the Maybeck-style of the main library.

Additionally, the council has indicated it wants to build a walkway on Lincoln Street between the Pine Inn and the annex.

Councilman David Maradei, long an outspoken supporter of the Lincoln Street plan, hopes the city can make a decision within the next couple of months.

"I think we'll be making a decision within the next two months. The council seems to be focusing its attention in that area," he told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

Although plans are proceeding, the city still has two major problems to confront before any final decision can be reached.

The first obstacle still to be resolved is an agreement with Pine Inn, which owns half the right-of-way on Lincoln Street. If the city wants to close Lincoln Street, it must obtain Pine Inn approval.

The city had negotiated with the Pine Inn, but the recent death of co-owner Max McKee has left the talks in limbo. The hotel is partly owned by McKee's father, Carroll McKee.

Secondly, there still is some public opposition to the Lincoln Street idea. Some residents would prefer to see the annex built at the originally proposed site on three city-owned lots on the northwest corner of Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue.

Lincoln Street resident Jane Nieman has mounted a petition drive to stop the Lincoln Street project.

Although the petition drive began several months ago, she still has not appeared before the council.

But, that does not mean the drive is dead, she told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook last week.

MRS. NIEMAN said her group wants to see Goodhue's plans before it brings the petitions to the council.

The plan now is to present the petitions to the council in early October, she said.

"We're trying to get up to 300 signatures and we're going to make it," she said. "We have about 275 now and three people still have petitions out. The opposition is there."

Mrs. Nieman protests council opinion that it only wants an annex under one roof. She recalled that one now-defunct council plan was for city hall to move into the Carmel Presbyterian Church on Ocean Avenue and use the Monte Verde Street city hall as an annex.

"If they're willing to accept city hall as an annex, why are they so opposed to an annex at Sixth and Lincoln?" Mrs. Nieman asked.

Closing Lincoln Street would add to traffic congestion, ruin views, reduce available parking and cause problems for emergency vehicle access, Mrs. Nieman argues.

Maradei remains steadfastly supportive of the Lincoln Street annex proposal.

"The best option seems to be keeping it under one roof and have it architecturally compatible with the existing building," he said.

The city then could use the corner lots for an underground parking garage and park, Maradei proposes.

"That's something I'd like to seriously consider," he said.

City Councilman Robert Stephenson has developed a plan to build a parking lot and

THE WEST side of Harrison Memorial Library (above) would be connected to an annex to be built directly on Lincoln Street, under a plan being developed by the city. The library board of trustees will get its first look at detailed drawings for the Lincoln Street annex when it meets at 4 p.m. Aug. 28 at city hall. (Michael Gardner photo.)

public restrooms on the corner that is "very economical."

But Stephenson's plan does not include underground parking or a park.

Stephenson proposes that the lot include a 15-foot setback that would have benches and also be planted with landscaping, which would help hide the lot from public view.

An in and out driveway would be developed at the southeast corner of the lot to save as much space as possible. Near that entrance, there would be a public restroom facility, he explained.

The lot would have 28 parking spaces with lights. The spaces would be timed for either one or two hour parking. Or there could be a gate at the entrance to charge a fee, he said.

Because the lot would have timed spaces, Stephenson does not believe the city would just be building more parking for the adjacent Pine Inn.

Stephenson estimates the cost of the lot, including restrooms, at $80,000.

the discipline and attendance policies," she said.

Motivating students also is important under the Peer School Excellence Project.

"We need to help the students clarify their long-term goals and understand the value of the classroom and the value of a four-year plan," she said.

"There will be more emphasis on helping teachers understand college requirements, and how classes relate to careers. We want to make the liaison between classroom and career more obvious."

The project also emphasizes the need to improve communication between the staff, community and school board.

"We want to have more study sessions with the departments and the school board. We need more communication by having more meetings of the site councils and Padre Parents," she said.

Students also may have to attend classes longer for more days this fall.

The district and staff unions are negotiating a plan to increase the number of school minutes by about 30 and also the number of days from 176 to 180.

There have been some staff changes at Carmel High School. Math teacher Duncan Faus has retired and English teacher Jeanne Muir transferred to Carmel Valley High School. Music teacher Gary Stotz has resigned.

Jay Criddle will teach two periods of computer education and still teach the same subject at the middle school. Middle school math teacher Pete Schmuck has transferred to the high school.

The district still needs to hire teachers for science, math, music, Spanish and French.

Big Sur business enjoys boom time

By ROBERT MISKIMON

BIG SUR merchants are enjoying a financial bonanza this summer every bit as good as anticipated when the reconstructed Highway 1 was reopened in April.

Although the surge in summer business — largely prompted by the Olympics and heavy publicity about the road reopening — may not fully compensate for last year's losses, it has put Big Sur on the road to recovery.

"Yahoo!" exclaimed Holly Fassett, manager of Nepenthe restaurant. "It's been absolutely, incredibly busy. This summer is better than we've ever done before."

"It's been busy from the word 'go.' We've just been riding a terrific wave. This is really

'It looks like it will take us just two years to catch up with last year's losses. We thought it would take longer than that. I think this will carry through November, depending on the weather. Then we expect it to pick up again in the spring.'

an exciting atmosphere that's fun to work in."

Ms. Fassett attributed much of the increase in tourism this summer to the Olympic Games, which recently concluded in Los Angeles. Also, national publicity hasn't hurt business in the tiny coastal village.

The New York Times, National Geographic, Chicago Tribune, Los Angeles Herald-Examiner, Christian Science Monitor all have run stories on the recovery of Big Sur after completion of the slide-damaged Highway 1.

That roadway was reopened April 11 after almost a year of intensive work by the California Department of Transportation that cost nearly $7 million — the largest state road reconstruction project in the history of California.

But before the road could be repaired, businesses in Big Sur suffered heavy losses; many were on the brink of bankruptcy. Tourist industry spokesmen have estimated Big Sur businesses lost more than $18 million while the road was closed.

"We've been inundated since Jan. 29, when the New York Times did a two-page section on us," said Ventana Inn manager Bob Bussinger. "We've had great business all through the summer. I think this will be a record year for the majority of us in Big Sur."

Bussinger said his normal summer staff of

BUSINESS is booming in Big Sur, and Holly Fassett, manager of Nepenthe restaurant

(above), says the surge during summer months will go a long way toward reversing the losses of last winter caused by closure of the storm-damaged Highway 1.

125 has been increased to 140 because of the crush of business.

"It looks like it will take us just two years to catch up with last year's losses," Bussinger told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook. "We thought it would take longer than that. I think this will carry through November, depending on the weather. Then we expect it to pick up again in the spring."

BARBARA DAUGHTERS, who manages Ripplewood with her husband Ken, said business has improved this summer but was not quite as enthusiastic as Bussinger.

"The Democratic convention was a real bust for us," she said. "We were slower than normal. But August has been real good. In general, it's been good but not good enough to make up for last year. It's going to be a long time before we make up for last year."

Mrs. Daughters said occupancy in her

16-unit resort was 65 percent last August, as compared with 95 percent occupancy in a typical August when the highway was open.

"We're almost at 100 percent this month, and September is usually pretty good," she said. "Last year, our gas sales were down 50 percent and we were down 30 percent overall."

Charles Pahl, one of the owners of The Store, said his retail outlet has experienced a jump in sales in the last two months, even though the business only has been open one year.

"From the third day we opened the door, it's paid the rent and utilities," Pahl said. "In the last two months, I've noticed things are picking up."

Victor Smolen, owner of Big Sur River Inn, said business this summer has been "considerably down from expectations," but better than last year at this time because of the reopening of Highway 1.

"Compared to last year, before the road opened, it's a great jump," Smolen said.

"However, the big increase I anticipated really hasn't come along. People just aren't coming. Total gross sales haven't been what I expected."

Smolen purchased the River Inn last October, when the highway originally was scheduled to reopen. Since he took over, he has spent some $750,000 to remodel and improve the facilities, Smolen told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

"But the road didn't open until April and there was a long period of losses," Smolen added.

Plans to reopen the adjacent Big Sur Village — with laundromat, delicatessen, gourmet shop and grocery store — have been frustrated by county officials, Smolen said. When that portion of the business is refurbished, Smolen expects things to improve.

"That area has been a terrible eyesore since the 1973 mudslide," Smolen said. "It was scheduled to reopen on Memorial Day, but the county keeps plaguing me with all sorts of bureaucratic technicalities."

Sanitary districts may yet cooperate on water project

DIRECTORS of the Pebble Beach Community Services District are willing to bury the hatchet with the Carmel Sanitary District.

And they're prepared to work with Carmel sanitary officials to comply with a state requirement to cease discharge into Carmel Bay.

But Pebble Beach sanitary directors are upset that the Carmel district has pursued alternatives to a water reclamation project without first consulting them.

The Carmel Sanitary District asked the cooperation of the Pebble Beach district — which purchases one-third the treatment capacity of the Carmel plant — and use of $11 million to complete the water reclamation project after a $9 million grant was denied by the Environmental Protection Agency.

The Pebble Beach Community Services District has initiated plans to construct its own 750,000-gallon-per-day treatment plant with about $11 million provided by the Pebble Beach Co.

The Carmel district has until Sept. 1 to notify the State Water Resources Control Board of its intention to comply with a cease and desist order which prohibits discharge into Carmel Bay (designated an "area of special biological significance") during summer months.

Other alternatives decided upon by Carmel directors in the wake of the EPA grant denial include petitioning the state to allow secondary-treated sewage and increased discharge into Carmel Bay, and asking the state to exclude a radius of 600 feet from the sewage outfall line from the protected designation.

"We, too, would agree that we should forget past differences and work for a common goal, if at all possible, in the best interest of both districts," wrote John Strong, president of the Pebble Beach district, in a letter to the Board of Directors of the Carmel Sanitary District.

Carmel directors are to discuss the letter when they meet at 1:30 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 23 in Carmel City Hall.

"Our board has since discussed the matter in greater detail and unanimously find it to be very disturbing that you have proceeded to act without our opportunity for input," Strong wrote.

"While you have called for cooperation with our board, you immediately acted unilaterally without our board so much as having a chance to meet or respond to your request, let alone the recent letter response to the state.

"Why has your general manager replied to the state with a series of proposals, all of which have in some way involved this district, and none of which are the result of mutual agreement of our two boards?" Strong asked.

"Also, why have direct contacts been made with this district's users (Pebble Beach Co.) independent of this district's prior knowledge?"

Strong nevertheless suggested in his letter to the Carmel sanitary board that the two agencies meet "in a truly cooperative manner" in future dealings with the state to comply with the cease and desist order.

Roseth named new Carmel planner

BRIAN ROSETH, who underwent a one year trial by fire by helping develop the revised 1983 Carmel General Plan, its implementing ordinances and zoning boundaries, is the new city planner.

Roseth will report to Assistant Planning Director Diane White.

Roseth originally was hired by the city in August of 1983 as an intern to survey the location and number of second story residences in Carmel. He was a graduate student at California Polytechnical Institute in San Luis Obispo.

Roseth has continued with the city as a planning intern. He developed the water conservation ordinance and was a key figure in the development of the revised 1983 Carmel General Plan.

Roseth also was caught in the middle when the implementing ordinances were introduced. The boundary changes and related restrictions on business were the most controversial issues in the subsequent implementing ordinances for the general plan.

The boundaries so angered commercial property owner Glenn Leidig that he claimed the still-intern Roseth and Mrs. White attended "zig-zag college" and "gerrymandering university."

Several job changes within various departments allowed City Administrator Doug Schmitz to hire a new planner.

Roseth accepted the job earlier this month.

Work will resume soon on Piccadilly Park landscape

WORK ON Piccadilly Park is expected to resume again soon after a delay caused by unexpected termite damage found in the Toots Lagoon Restaurant wall.

The original Piccadilly Park plans envisioned planting vines that would grow on trestles connected on large poles and the wall, landscape architect Gordon Andrews told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook Aug. 17.

The vines were expected to grow along the trestles and posts to hide the stark white wall adjacent to the park on the west side of Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues, Andrews said.

A mural had been dismissed because "in time it would age and we were looking for a more permanent solution," Andrews said. "We want to get rid of the big flat effect of the wall."

However after the posts were constructed and the trestles delivered, the city found that the Toots Lagoon wall was too badly damaged by termites to support the trestles.

It appears now that the city will place a beam across the already installed poles to hold the trestles in place. The bottom portion of the wall is to be stuccoed. Fireproofed and painted plywood will be attached to the top of the wall, Andrews said.

Meanwhile, the city continues to accept cash or materials donated for Piccadilly Park.

A teak bench imported from London valued at about $500 has been donated to the park by "People for Piccadilly."

Cash donations can be made through Assistant City Administrator Greg D'Ambrosio at 624-2781. For more information on materials donations, call Andrews at the city Public Works Department, 624-3543.

County road projects to continue

SEVERAL ROADS projects by the Monterey County Public Works crew will continue through Aug. 28.

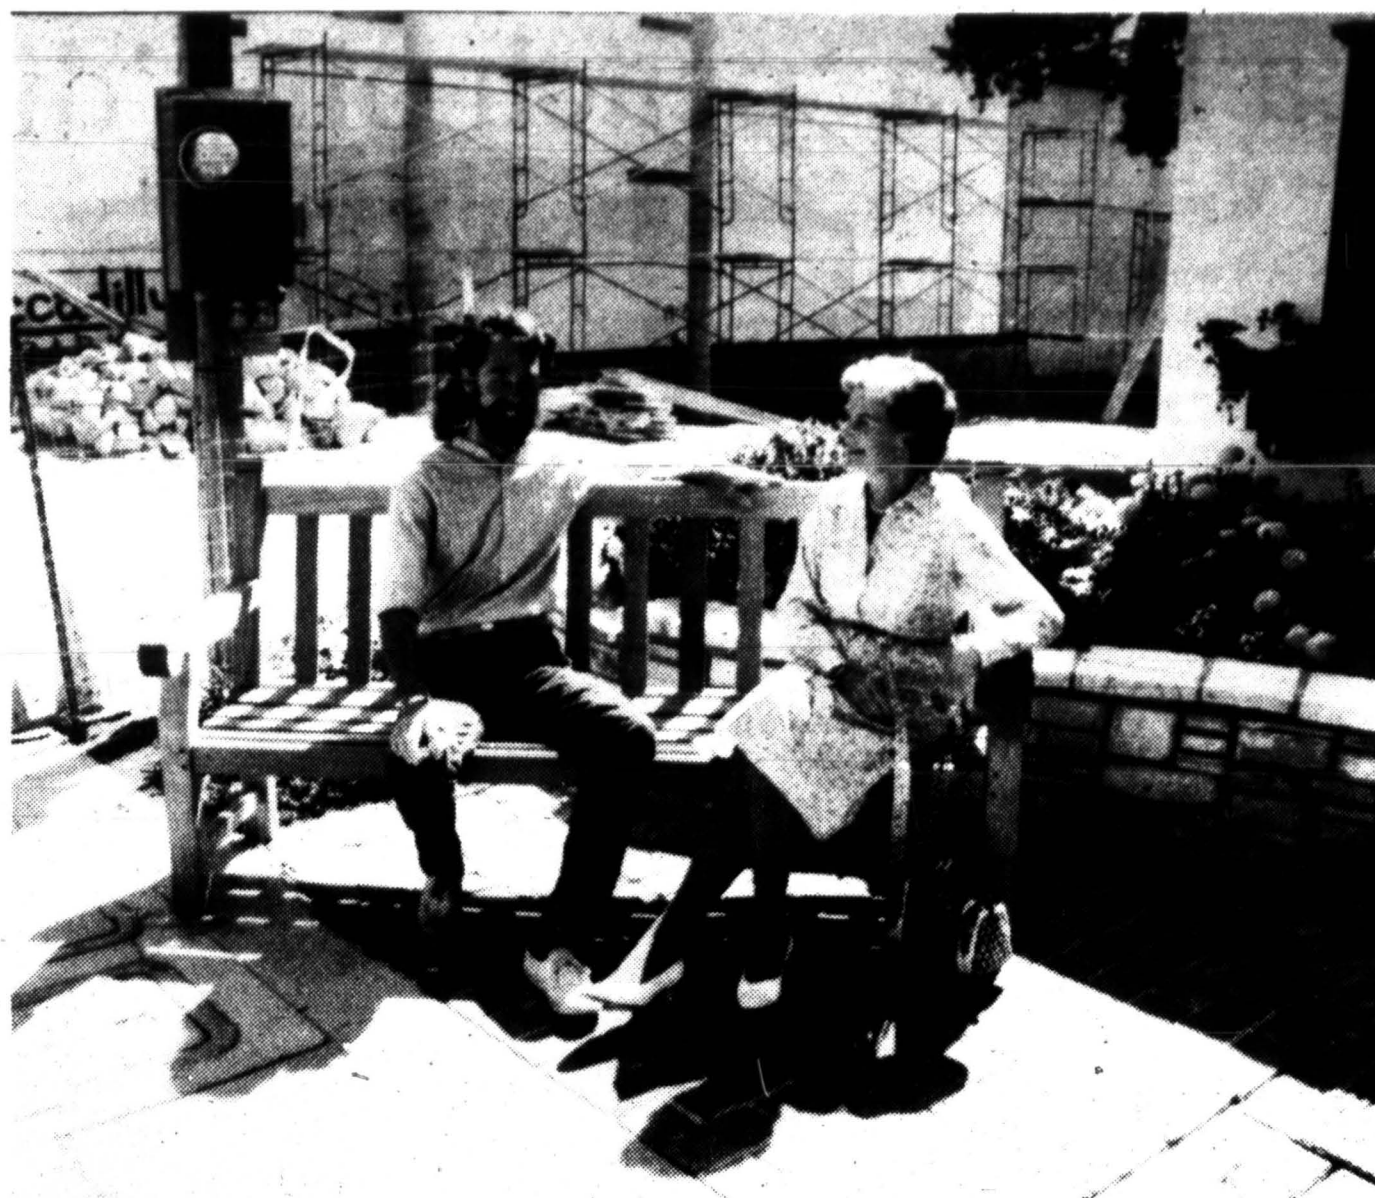

The crews will place asphalt and crushed rock surface on the streets to extend road life and reduce maintenance costs.

Traffic will be controlled by flagmen with possible short delays. Drivers are urged to be cautious and drive 25 m.p.h. so that loose gravel will not fly up and damage cars.

Some of the roads in the Carmel, Carmel Valley and Carmel Highlands areas to be resurfaced include: Rio Road from Atherton Road to Highway 1; Robinson Canyon Road from the southerly end to near Holt Road;

Cypress Way from Highland Drive to Fern Canyon Road; Fern Canyon Road from Highway 1 to Highland Drive; Mount Devon Road from Highland Drive to its end; Highland Drive from Highway 1 to Cypress Way;

Pine Way from Fern Canyon to Highland Drive; Spindrift Road from Highway 1 to Highway 1; Spruce Way from Corona Road to Fern Canyon Road; and Peter Pan Road from Highway 1 to its end.

THE "PEOPLE For Piccadilly" has donated a teak bench imported from London to the city for use in Piccadilly Park, west side of Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues. Above relaxing on the bench are Piccadilly Park landscape architect Gordon Andrews and Jean Mitchell, a member of the Carmel-by-the-Sea Garden Club. For more information on how to donate materials or money for the park, call Greg D'Ambrosio at 624-2781 or Gordon Andrews at 624-3543. (Michael Gardner photo.)

La Playa 'peach pink' displeases city planners

By MICHAEL GARDNER

IN AN unusual display of anger, the Carmel Planning Commission has accused La Playa Hotel officials with "deliberate violations" of city ordinances for having painted the remodeled structure a light peach color.

The outburst by several planners, including a visibly emotional chairwoman Sandy Swain, was the latest round in the city-La Playa feud over the new color of the hotel, southwest corner of Camino Real Street and Eighth Avenue. Commissioners used harsh words for La Playa officials, including "stonewalling...amazing attitude...(and) no concern for the community."

La Playa owners already have painted the hotel light peach, without city approval. The planning commission apparently approved a dirty-white, but there is some question about that decision because there is no record on tape or in the minutes that planners ever discussed the color of the hotel.

An attempt by La Playa to have the new color approved after the fact failed on a 3-3 vote cast during the Aug. 15 planning commission meeting.

Opposed to the new color are Ms. Swain, Gene Hammond and Fred McNulty. Supporters of La Playa are Art Mertens, Gene Cava and Richard Barrett.

The absence of Commissioner John Logan, who was out of town on business, would not have affected the outcome of the vote. Logan had written a letter to the commission that stated his opposition to the new paint color.

LA PLAYA Hotel finally obtained approval for its landscape plans from the city Aug. 15. However, the planning commission rejected on a 3-3 vote the color of the hotel. If La Playa officials do not want to repaint the hotel they will have to appeal that decision to the city council Sept. 4. Above is the new gazebo in the courtyard of the hotel. (Michael Gardner photo.)

Now it appears La Playa will have to appeal that denial to the city council, which next meets on Sept. 4.

But the council may not be friendly either as a result of a sequence of events in June and July.

In late June, La Playa approached the planning commission at the end of a meeting for approval of their landscape design, the final step in its multi-million dollar remodeling project that closed the hotel for six months.

Hotel representatives did not disclose specific plans, but rather told commissioners what they had in mind.

Commissioners determined that they needed specific, drawn plans before they could approve the landscape design.

Anxious to reopen the hotel, La Playa officials went to the council shortly afterward. That council meeting in July produced several heated exchanges, in which La Playa co-owner John Cope threatened legal action if the plans were not approved.

"We'll see you in court," was City Administrator Doug Schmitz' reply.

THE COUNCIL then directed the planning commission to meet in special session on La Playa landscaping.

Commissioners did not agree on the plan and continued the hearing until later in July.

Meanwhile, the city building department would not issue an authorization for occupancy because several health and safety projects still were not completed.

La Playa finished those projects and then obtained a court order to force the city to inspect the site on a weekend so that the occupancy authorization could be issued.

As part of the agreement, La Playa posted several bonds to ensure it would meet city requirements on sidewalks and installation of curbs and gutters.

Included in that agreement was a $20,000 bond that would require La Playa to repaint the exterior of the building if the planning commission required it.

When that decision was before the planning commission, some of the members were in a foul mood.

And they made no attempts to hide their anger at La Playa officials, whom they accused of being uncooperative and misleading.

Some of the planners are very angry about the way La Playa allegedly has misled the city about its landscaping and color plans. They also think La Playa owners, who are from San Francisco, are belligerent and uncompromising in their demands.

The hearing on the color for La Playa opened with Ms. Swain reading the letter from Logan. In his letter, Logan accused La Playa of "deliberately violating the terms of its permit."

Logan called the explanations and attitude of La Playa a "shocker" and added that he felt "appalled" at their "amazing attitude."

"I guess I'm tired of turning the other cheek," said Ms. Swain.

"They (La Playa officials) did it. They changed the color without going through the planning department."

"I am tired of the planning commission being made the scapegoat for what the owners and what the La Playa architect did," she added.

"I think the planning commission has been made the whipping boy. I got it in spades and I really object to it," she said in reference to numerous home telephone calls about the paint color.

'IT'S NOT hard to share John's and your feelings," added Mertens.

"At the very least it's irritating and at the very most it's defiant," he said of the actions by La Playa.

Planning commission won't go for La Playa paint job

But Mertens tempered his remarks. "We're here to judge the new color that was submitted. I have never talked to anyone who said they disliked it."

"I hope we're not letting our emotional response color our judgment of the issue at hand."

"It all depends whether you like pink or not. I don't think there's one member of this

'It all depends whether you like pink or not. I don't think there's one member of this commission that can't judge this objectively.'

commission that can't judge this objectively," Ms. Swain said.

The third opponent, McNulty, refrained from blasting La Playa. "I personally do not like pink. I feel very torn on this."

Commissioners then voted 3-3 to allow the new color. The tie vote meant denial of the color.

However, then the question of whether the commission truly approved the old color came up.

Mertens said he found no mention of the color in his review of all of the tapes and meeting minutes.

When they originally approved the remodeling project last summer, commissioners apparently did so on the recommendation of the design review committee.

However, the design review committee did not keep written records of its recommendations so there is no record of whether the paint was approved when the remodeling plan was given an okay.

The only record of a color is a drawing of the proposed plan kept in the file for La Playa, which indicates a yellowish color.

"I don't think we should take that color as a paint sample," Barrett said Aug. 15. "If we did, then we would really have our phones ringing off the hook."

Barrett then called for another vote which resulted in the same 3-3 tie.

Ms. Swain ended the paint color discussion with the comment: "I would suggest the applicant appeal to the city council."

La Playa officials were present at the meeting, but did not comment during discussion of the paint color.

However, a day after the session, architect Fred Keeble provided the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook with a written statement in response to commissioners' complaints that he did not present a color proposal earlier.

Keeble argued that during that time the city had imposed a moratorium on consideration of new permits to give staff a chance to prepare the implementing ordinances for the revised general plan.

IT WOULD have been useless to develop a landscape plan at that time, he wrote.

"I phoned the planning department in March 1984 regarding an application for color approval and was told that the commission was not going to act on any matters until the June meeting.

"I called Bob Griggs, at that time planning director, and asked if any consideration would be given to projects under construction, and was told that the ruling affected all applications."

"I reviewed this matter with the owners and as the project was scheduled for completion the first of July, it was not possible to wait three months for planning commission action before painting the building," Keeble said.

After denial of the paint color, commissioners still had to review the proposed landscape plans.

Some commissioners want La Playa to provide less landscaping and more parking. The commission also had expressed concern about the high water use plants included in the landscape design.

And once again commissioners took the opportunity to criticize the attitude of La Playa.

"He (the applicant) has so little concern about these things or our community," said Hammond in reference to La Playa's alleged unwillingness to compromise with the city.

"We have been talking to a stone wall. We have got no consideration," Hammond claimed.

But gardener Sara Vorkoeper told commissioners: "I don't recollect anyone making a recommendation to change. I would have definitely looked into that."

Keeble added "I don't believe there was a recommendation to change the landscaping."

Mertens liked the hotel with lots of landscaping. "When is enough, enough? Here is a park-like setting...a joy to see."

Mertens also argued that La Playa has reduced its landscaping from what was there before the remodeling.

And a new sprinkler system will save more water, he pointed out.

Commissioners voted 5-1, with Hammond dissenting, to approve the landscaping.

MISSION RANCH Resort owners have asked the county for a conforming status with zoning regulations, and plan to demolish existing tennis courts (above), farmhouse, restaurant and motel units to build a 65-unit clustered housing development.

ing status is that the resort now could not be reconstructed if it burned in a fire, Ellis said. But with a conforming status the resort property can be improved and could be rebuilt in case of fire, he said.

Mission Ranch owners seek change in zoning

WITH ITS proposed housing project "several years away," the Mission Ranch Corp. sees its bid for conforming status with county zoning as a self-protective step.

Owners of the more than 40-year-old Mission Ranch Resort — already embroiled in a lawsuit with the city of Carmel — want a change in the zoning status for the hotel, restaurant and tennis court complex.

The Mission Ranch Corp. has asked the Monterey County Planning Commission for a use permit that would grant the project "conforming" status with county zoning.

Commissioners have scheduled a hearing on the application for 11:30 a.m. Wednesday, Aug. 29 at the county courthouse in Salinas.

The resort is classified as "non-conforming," which means its present use would not be allowed today.

However, since the resort was in operation before the zoning was adopted the site was "grandfathered" in as non-conforming and allowed to continue.

The Carmel Area Local Coastal Program includes language that allows Mission Ranch to apply for conforming status, according to county Zoning Administrator Dale Ellis.

Conforming status is important if the owners want to improve the property, Ellis told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

"About all they can do now literally is paint," he said.

Another important factor to the conforming status is that the resort now could not be reconstructed if it burned in a fire, Ellis said.

But with a conforming status the resort property can be improved and could be rebuilt in case of fire, he said.

Mission Ranch Corp. spokesman Douglas Tuck pointed out that the housing project is "several years away" because of the lawsuit with the city of Carmel and anticipated lengthy public hearings on the site plans.

"Lord knows when we'll get that settled. If there's a fire and we're not conforming, then we're in the soup. We'd be in trouble as far as rebuilding those buildings."

The city in its lawsuit seeks to block a June 17 decision by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors to rezone the property for residential use.

That rezoning cleared the way for Mission Ranch Corp. to make formal application for a residential development on the property just south of the city limits near Carmel Mission.

The owners have announced plans to demolish the existing tennis courts, farmhouse, restaurant and motel units to make way for a 65-unit clustered housing development.

The city contends that the county erred in rezoning the property for housing. The city wants more property set aside as non-developable because allegedly it is in the floodplain. The county contends that only 4.68 acres of the approximately 21-acre site is in the floodplain.

A hearing date has yet to be scheduled on the lawsuit.

THOUGH MOST of the jumps on the Olympic course were high and wide, this water jump proved to be the nemesis for many contestants. In show jumping, the horse must clear the water entirely — as happened with the Swiss horse above — under the scrutiny of a jump judge who watched for the slightest ripple to signal a penalty.

High steppers at Olympics

WHILE THIS is usually a Valley column, the Olympic experience is still so close at hand that it seems to merit yet one more article in one more publication.

The populace has finally crawled away from the television set, which by the end of the games had us pretty much convinced that Budweiser, MacDonald's and AT&T were participating countries in the XXIII Olympiad.

Those who attended the games in person seem to seek each other out to continue the party and relive the excitement of the event — the hype, the superadulation, the immoderate use of the words "best" and "most."

Lyn Hiber of Carmel Valley — one of many Valleyites at the games — says she still can't speak normally after watching Reiner Klimke; everything comes out in superlatives. I have the same problem.

It's hard to say whether the spirit of internationalism was more prevalent among those who went to the Olympics or those who watched on television. Certainly those who saw the extensive network coverage saw a broader range of events than those who traveled to Los Angeles.

The logistical difficulty of driving to and from the many staging areas — called venues — was such that I suspect people chose one location and settled in for the events at that location.

Of the crowd gathered at Santa Anita for the equestrian spectacular, nearly everyone I met had come to the games specifically for those events. While we certainly were interested in other sports, the inspiration of being a live part of one scene overrode any temptation to drive through the vehicular thicket to find another.

After the return trip home, the feverish emotion of having actually seen the best in one field overshadowed the achievements of the athletes who seemed like television creations by comparison.

For instance, it was impossible to share the ecstasy about Greg Louganis, the diver, in the abstract after watching Joe Fargis and his mare Touch of Class as they floated without flaw over the show-jumping course.

With this in mind, it seems appropriate to consider a suggestion by Bil Steinkraus, chairman of the United States Equestrian Team and veteran of six Olympics where he rode for the United States. Steinkraus also provided the commentary — with Tad Coffin — for the horse events covered by ABC.

Steinkraus has said he would like to see the various events at different locations around the world, so that cities which do not have the full facilities necessary to accommodate the entire affair would still be host to the portion of the games for which they were qualified.

If the events were scheduled consecutively in different cities rather than simultaneously, more people would be able to see more competitions. The international flavor would be enhanced if more countries acted as host.

Another suggestion has been to create a permanent site for the games in a politically neutral country. This probably would encourage more countries to participate regardless of the political climate, but it strikes me as a rather sterile solution.

Part of the Olympic magic is found in the cultural offerings of the countries visited by people who for the most part would otherwise not be exposed to the customs of that land. The cultural icons of a permanent Olympic setting would most likely be limited to T-shirts and beer mug souvenirs on which only the inscribed Olympic year would change.

Besides, it sounds much too orderly. Without a little mayhem, what's to hype the bourgeoisie?

Along with the bourgeoisie, there were a few royal sprinklings in attendance at Santa Anita. The Swedish monarchs were a handsome pair of highnesses. Before Princess Anne of Great Britain arrived to compete with Roumania's Ecaterina Szabo for a medal in pouting for the camera, her father, Prince Philip, was in evidence everywhere, casting elegance in his wake like peacock feathers and charming the socks off the American public, which always fawns at a royal face.

The prince consort of Great Britain had the interesting experience — to me, if not to him — of watching Prince Consort the horse dance through his dressage test for the British team. From the looks of each and the score of the latter, the older consort is the better dancer, but I'd take either if offered.

More about names: Something about the way the English name things... Wily Trout, a dressage horse ridden by Christopher Bartle, pushes the funny buttons. And the pair of Spanish rider Luis Astolfi aboard a jumper named Feinschnitt Z imparts a distinctly international flavor, albeit olive schnitzel.

Chris Bartle is a gracious fellow as well as a great rider.

Sage: "You had a wonderful ride. That was such a pleasure to watch."

Bartle: "Oh, did you really think so? Actually, I rather enjoyed it myself."

Megas: "Rumors were as fertile at Santa Anita as they are in Carmel Valley; I almost forgot I'd left home. The scope of the gossip, though, was definitely Ellay.

Marzog is a horse, specifically an 11-year-old gelding — gorgeous, but a biological dead end.

Anne-Grethe Jensen is a Danish Olympic rider who owns Marzog and trained him to his present status as one of the top dressage performers in the world.

Last year they won the world championship. Last month, the Chronicle of the Horse, which rivals the New Yorker for accuracy, reported that Marzog the great Dane would remain in the United States after the games to be sold for what teenagers call "megabucks."

Those megabucks turned out to be $3.2 million or $3.4 million, depending on which side of the stadium you heard it. The future owner was reported to be Ellen Dixon-Rosedale, whose daddy owns a baseball team somewhere — supposedly a relevant fact.

Now, even in Equestria, which is characterized as a checkbook world by many, three-point anything million dollars is an unholy amount to consider. The fact that Marzog is almost as elegant as HRH Philip and is the possessor of a face designed in Hollywood doesn't change that.

After the medals were awarded — Marzog and Jensen garnered the silver — a small item by Los Angeles Times reporter Lynn Simmross stated that Jensen would not part with Marzog. Dixon-Rosedale's point of view was not offered. We'll see.... I'm betting on the Chronicle.

The spirit of internationalism was present everywhere. If there was a nationalist zealot in the competitive lot, I didn't see or hear of it.

The French bred toasted the eclat of the Yugoslavs and the Chilean duo of Americo Simonetti and Amaranto were heartily cheered by jumper Shuichi Toko, who proffered the remark that says it best: "I love them all."

SUPERINTENDENT William Rand said he welcomes a decision by the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education to hire an outside consultant to help improve communication between himself and the board.

Board to hire a consultant to improve communication

"WE'VE HAD 15 different board members since I was hired six years ago," Carmel Unified School District Supt. William Rand said Tuesday after the Board of Education decided to hire an outside consultant to improve communication between the superintendent and the board.

"That's why I think this is a healthy process," Rand elaborated. "This is an opportunity for the board and I to sit down with an outside person and discuss how we're going to handle our internal and external procedures."

The Carmel Middle School library was packed with citizens who turned out for Monday's meeting, evidently the result of a discussion Trustee Patricia Condren had earlier with an unidentified group. Four of the citizens voiced support for Rand at the session.

An attempt by the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook to contact Mrs. Condren by telephone was unsuccessful. Husband Don Condren said his he and his wife were preparing for a two-day vacation and that Patricia Condren would have no comment.

Board President Robert Fenton likewise could not be reached for comment after the meeting.

Fenton said Monday that the board and Rand had agreed during a closed meeting that a consultant — either one provided by the California School Boards Association or from a private firm — should be hired to help communication between the board and Rand.

"A consultant would help us establish goals and clarify procedures," Rand told this newspaper. "It would help all of our operations. Both the board and I have to look at procedures and how the board and superintendent will operate."

Rand declined to elaborate on what kinds of communication problems had developed, but noted that a similar decision to employ an outside consultant was made in 1981-82.

"Business does this kind of thing from time to time, and I think it's helpful," Rand said.

In other business, trustees approved on first reading a plan to charge students $25 per semester for home-to-school busing. The fee comes before the board again Sept. 6 for final reading. Under the scheme, the maximum that could be charged to a single family is $62.50.

Students who are eligible for free or reduced-fee lunches, as well as the handicapped and those who must attend a school outside their regular attendance area are exempt from the busing fee.

Rand said the busing fee will compensate for a $45,000 annual discrepancy between costs to provide the service and state reimbursement to the district.

Trustees also approved a plan to eliminate split schedule busing of elementary students in school year 1985-86, a move expected to save the district another $30,000 per year.

Barracudas bring home third place trophy

The Barracuda Aquatic swimmers brought home a third place trophy last weekend from the Coast Valley Aquatic League Championships at the Salinas community pool. This ended a summer-long dual season for the 134 local swimmers who competed in Salinas with the other seven teams in the league.

Highlighting the Barracuda tank efforts was the 11/12 boys medley relay team of Norman Rial, Brian Langley, Adam Stiles, Brian Garneau, who broke the CVAL league record with a time of 2:14.58. The eight-and-under boys and girls (Courtney Brockman, Amy Leatherman, Lauren Johnson, Heather Pease, Amy Sullivan, Kyle Nichols, Robert Allaire, Aaron Gaily, Micah Lande, and Jonathan Cooke) swept both the free and medley relays to garner winning points for the team.

Norman Rial, a triple winner in the 50-yard breaststroke, 50-yard butterfly, and 50-yard backstroke, was the only Barracuda to capture a gold as well as a silver in the 100-yard individual medley.

Jenny Wolf grabbed four medals — a silver in the 200-yard individual medley and the bronze in the 100-yard breast, 100-yard fly, and the 100-yard back in the 15/18 girls age group. The other finalist in that age group was Mary McCormick. Finalists in the boys 15/18 age group were Mike Sandstrum, Mike Falge, Jamie Olson.

Other Barracuda point getters in the finals were Becky Reveto, Matt Smith, Erin Johnson, Nate Stiles, (9/10); Adam Stiles, Meredith Smith, (11/12); George Pilostomos, Becky Eskind, Jeff Millette, Tanna Franke, (13/14).

RESIDENTS of the Boronda area of the Carmel River hope to convince the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District to provide some immediate protection against further winter erosion, since a planned river management program will not start this year. The Committee for Common Sense wants the district to remove snags (above) from the river bed this fall. (Victoria Andrews photo).

Boronda residents to push for interim erosion help

By ROBERT MISKIMON

A $350,000 PROGRAM to control erosion along a two-mile stretch of the Carmel River won't get started until next year, but some residents of the Boronda area can't wait that long.

The Committee for Common Sense — which has raised a number of questions about the cost and effectiveness of the proposed river management program — wants the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District to provide some immediate protection against winter storm damage.

The group has called a special meeting of property owners and residents of the "Boronda reach" area for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 29 at the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club.

Members of the group were among about 50 residents who attended a briefing with water district manager Bruce Buel, district engineer Gary Page, and director Patricia Bernardi last week on the proposed erosion project. That meeting was attended by both supporters and opponents of the scheme.

Water district directors have tentatively scheduled an election on the financing mechanism for the proposed assessment district for next spring, since a required environmental impact report was not completed in time for the November ballot.

The Committee for Common Sense plans to petition the water district for:

- Free willows to be planted and maintained by riverfront dwellers, as an erosion control measure.
- Removal of major snags, such as felled trees and accumulated sediment, from the riverbed.

- Issuance to river residents of a guidebook on river bank protection.
- A specific cost breakdown and analysis of the proposed Boronda reach project.
- Written instructions on the use of a district-proposed emergency "hot line" and the availability of sandbags for bank protection.

Margaret Lidstrom, acting president of the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club and a member of the Committee for Common Sense, said her group believes the water district should use some of the $90,000 accumulated toward the Boronda project for these immediate measures before this winter's rains commence.

The group has another concern related to financing of the project. District staff have indicated a search is underway for federal money to lessen the burden on riverfront property owners.

But Mrs. Lidstrom said she believes the district is barking up the wrong tree.

"A personal interview with Leon Panetta... (reveals) that no federal agency will even consider funding a small project along a river," she said. "Why? Because it never works and the money is wasted."

"A river is a total entity and must be treated as such. A two-mile stretch will never qualify for federal support, no matter how many hopeful assurances we may be given from MPWMD personnel."

Manager Bruce Buel was on vacation and unavailable for comment, and Congressman Leon Panetta was in Central America at press time.

Frohman Foundation will look for office space in and out of Carmel

THE SYDNEY Frohman Foundation will look for office space in and outside of Carmel as a result of city council delay Tuesday in choosing a tenant for the city-owned Flanders Mansion.

"We've been waiting since February to hear," said Frohman Foundation Executive Director Mikel Pippi after the meeting. "Not having Flanders doesn't mean we're leaving Carmel, but we are looking around elsewhere."

"We have a potential site in Pacific Grove, but there's also a possibility we may move to Carmel High School or Carmelo School. We may also get an office at Sunset Center," Pippi told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

The Carmel City Council considered two potential tenants for the Flanders Mansion — the Artasia Foundation and the Frohman Foundation — but ruled out the former since it is not a non-profit foundation.

Council members voted 3-2 not to secure a permanent tenant for the estate inside Mission Trail Park until an engineering report on rehabilitation of the building is complete. By the same vote, the council rejected a recommendation of a citizens committee that the Frohman Foundation be chosen as a tenant.

Councilman David Maradei, who was joined by Councilman Robert Stephenson in opposition to the council action, said the result of the vote is that selection of a tenant is now delayed by at least three or four months.

"It now goes on the planning commission agenda of priorities," Maradei said. "This means that the minimum time for them to consider it will be three or four months."

"It seems to me that if there was some concern among the council about the Frohman Foundation it would have come out during negotiations. They have deposited $100,000 in a local bank as good faith money toward refurbishment of the estate."

"The Frohman Foundation is a creditable organization that provides services to young people, and it is strongly supported by the schools. They deserve the opportunity to show what they can do. The worst case is that the city gets the property back if they fail."

The property now houses the Carmel Art Institute, which will remain in the Flanders Mansion until the council decides on a future tenant. Councilwoman Helen Arnold said she was concerned about throwing out the Art Institute and director John Cunningham after 40 years of service to the community.

Serra bicentennial mass at mission Aug. 28

THE BICENTENNIAL year celebrating the 200th anniversary of the death of Junipero Serra will be officially opened at a mass and dedication ceremony at Carmel Mission Basilica at 11 a.m. Aug. 28.

More than 30 Catholic bishops from California and Mexico will be in attendance. Included among those bishops will be Cardinal Timothy Manning of Los Angeles, Bishop Thaddeus Shubsda of Monterey, Archbishop John Quinn of San Francisco, Bishop Pierre DuMaine of San Jose and bishops from La Paz, Tijuana and Sonora, Mexico.

Also in attendance will be Congressman Leon Panetta, State Senator Henry Mello, Assemblyman Sam Farr and the mayors of Monterey, Pacific Grove, Seaside and Marina. Many local supervisors are slated to attend as well.

In addition to the mass, a dedication of the original fountain from the time of Junipero Serra will take place in the mission courtyard. After a dedication, Bishop Thaddeus Shubsda will conduct a press conference.

The event is open to the public. A buffet will be served to the public after the mass and dedication.

BUSINESS BEAT

White knight unseated?

STAY TUNED! Just when it appeared that the ill-fated Stock Exchange restaurant had been rescued by a knight on a white horse, the Carmel business license board threatened to unseat the knight!

Howard ("Bud") Allen's proposed name for his new establishment, It's Bud's Pub, proved to be not only a tongue-twister but also a point of contention. Allen told board members he was a somewhat reluctant entrepreneur in this case.

"Unfortunately now I've got it and I have to do something with it," he said, perhaps only half-jokingly. Allen explained that his plans are for light suppers and lunches similar to the cocktail lounge he operated when he was owner of La Playa Hotel.

Board member Sandy Swain, chairwoman of the Carmel Planning Commission, objected first. "That name! What is the definition of a pub? That's the part I object to," she said.

Allen answered that in his recent tour of England and Ireland he had been in more than 40 pubs "and they are all different." He added that "Bud" is an easy name, already familiar to many because of Bud's Ice Cream and Budweiser Beer. "I plan to add the words 'English-Irish-American' to the sign," he said.

Assistant Carmel Planning Director Diane White referred to the existing use permit for the space off Dolores Street and said that the primary use is for a restaurant. City zoning restrictions restrict the number of places serving alcoholic beverages, which means food service must be at least 51 percent of the business. She said to Bud Allen: "If you want to change the emphasis, you would have to apply for a new use permit."

Allen hesitated. "The food is the drawing point," he said. "But I can't tell you if it will be 51/49 percent." Assistant Carmel Police Chief Bob Fischer interjected: "It has been a cocktail lounge for years. I'd be glad to have it locally owned."

Mrs. White agreed to meet with Allen to review the situation. But the name still rankled.

"I'm not satisfied; I have strong feelings about the name. How many Americans know that pubs also serve food? It just highlights the bar aspect," Sandy Swain said.

"I am really trying to bring a new concept, and, frankly, if it goes I hope to franchise it. Everything is built around the idea of a pub," Allen replied. Fred Stanley, who represents the Carmel Business Association on the board, said: "It's a legitimate food operation in other countries."

In a "straw vote" on the issue of the name, the board appeared to be sharply divided. Fischer, Stanley and citizen representative Glenn Crawford seemed to have no problem with the concept of a pub serving food, nor did building inspector Butch Maloney. Diane White, Assistant Carmel Fire Chief Vern Allred and Ms. Swain continued to object.

The man with the idea — Bud Allen — didn't try to hide his disappointment. "My whole concept is pub. I would have second thoughts about opening it. I may have to get someone else to do it if my concept is not accepted."

The board voted to continue the matter until its Aug. 23 meeting.

"OFF-PRICE"?

It was the second time at bat for Thomas and Anne Sanford's application for a business name change.

Sanford reminded the board this was a re-application because of earlier objections to the name, T.R. Sanford, and terminology used on the original application. "I trust you have had time to think about it," he said.

Questions arose about the meaning of "off-price" and whether the apparel will be sold at other than the original cost. Sanford said it is "normal merchandise" that is sold at the San Carlos Street shop, which is still called Cameo Fashions.

"They aren't seconds," he explained. "We have upgraded the merchandise, have made it all top-quality." He added that the apparel goes back and forth between the Carmel shop and his similar shop at The Crossroads.

Board members, including City Administrator Doug Schmitz, attempted to determine whether the clothes now sold are different from what is sold in other women's apparel shops in some way, or different from what the Sanfords said at the time of their original application.

"We're not accenting 'off-price' designer clothes," Sanford said. "It's just like any other women's apparel, designer clothing for less. The activity is the same as it was before, there was nothing wrong with it in the first place."

Further questions led Sanford to say that their original application may not have been accurate. "Off-price is really a sales gimmick," he said. "Too much emphasis has been placed on that."

The board voted to continue its hearing on the application and Schmitz said he would like an opportunity to look at the store. A frustrated Sanford protested: "Why are you continuing it? It's costing us money because we can't get our own name and sign over our business!"

"We want to see," Schmitz said. Allred closed the discussion, for now: "We want people to have a good feeling when they leave your store and a good feeling for Carmel."

A HAPPY ENDING — OR BEGINNING

After a two-week delay, the business license board granted the application of Henerikus De Groot for a gallery to replace the Saint Galy Studio on Sixth Avenue. The delay was to give Assistant Carmel Planning Director Diane White time to consider the previous and proposed uses for the two-level space. Her report was that there had been a studio on the second level, and plans do not include retail sales in that area. Absentee owner De Groot, represented by Carmel attorneys Bob Ernst and Fred Farr, will sell original paintings, ceramics, prints and soft sculpture.

SIGNATURES — MORE OF SAME

A change is coming in Hampton Court at San Carlos and Seventh: Marilyn and Jim Delaney will open a second women's apparel store, right next door to their first one.

When Kiwi Krafts went out of business, the Delaneys decided to make the most of the opportunity to expand. They applied for, and won, a separate license. "There is no connecting door and we don't plan to open it up," Delaney told the business license board.

THE HOTEL NEWS IS UP-BEAT

The "grande dame" among Carmel hostels has had a facelift and she looks great! The "new" La Playa is recognizable and charming, and will please traditionalists.

While I waited for manager Christine Barrett to take me on a tour, I enjoyed the light, airy lobby, which was a busy scene. It looks much larger than it used to. From the fine tiled floor to the arched doorways, the stained glass at the stairway and tapestries on the wall, there is definitely a Mediterranean look.

pedestal-statues. When she joined me, Christine explained that Newton Cope, Sr. — head of the family business that now owns La Playa — was happy to find such a perfect home for his cherished pieces. "The fireplace was built for them," Christine said. I carried with me the thought that it would have been nice to have a real fireplace there. Not feasible in a building of such age and size?

We walked through the lobby and toward the new dining room. That was the only area that looked smaller. It seemed very pleasant. The bar has been somewhat enlarged, and it is set off from the other areas by an impressive shoulder-high wall of cherry, topped by wooden columns.

Alongside the main dining room is the Poseidon Room, which looks huge. That room holds many pleasant memories for me, especially of Mother's Day buffets, and I was pleased to see that here, too, the local heritage has been emphasized. The wooden beams in the ceiling of this room are splendid.

The room, which can seat 150 for special parties and banquets, opens to a fine new terrace, which is now available for lunch or dinner, weather permitting. It has a fine view over the gardens of the hotel and on to the hills of lower Carmel Valley. (I was there on a foggy day and it was hard to tell sky from ocean, but Christine assured me that you can see the latter on a clear day, too.) La Playa Sunday brunches, just inaugurated, can take advantage of that attractive setting.

The guest rooms are nice, although the ones I saw were not striking from an interior design point of view. The furniture seemed uncoordinated, though most of it follows the Mediterranean theme. A couple of nice touches — shutters on the windows of most rooms, and all the wooden headboards with carved mermaids. All the bathrooms have been redone, and there was some nice tile work in the ones I saw.

On our way back out, we stopped to look at a small "fireplace room" off the lobby that can be used for small meetings. Here Newton Cope, Sr. obviously had some more fun, contributing from his collection of art work and prints of considerable historical interest. Looking out the window to the pool and loggia below, Christine pointed out another of his contributions — a solid brass seal of the State of California, embedded in the cement.

"There's a time capsule under it," Christine said. There is also a new iron gazebo by the completely rebuilt pool, and, from above, one can appreciate the reach of the tile roofs that give the hotel its look of an earlier California.

I hope La Playa won its battle with Carmel officials over the exterior color of the buildings, as I can't imagine a "tan" that would be as pleasant as the soft color used on the outside and carried to the interior as well.

As I was leaving La Playa, I heard a delightful sound and turned back to find out what it was. It was an antique console that housed a fine music box. That was a gift from former La Playa owner Bud Allen. "He comes by every now and then to see how we're doing," Christine said.

He must be pleased. So was San Francisco columnist Herb Caen, who after a recent visit to La Playa to recover from the Olympics in Los Angeles, said: "Wow! What a beautiful place!"

AND KUDOS FOR THE HIGHLANDS INN

Some local residents have found it hard to find the old Highlands Inn within the dramatically new one, and have missed it. However, most visitors to the inn and its restaurants, both localites and "foreigners," delight in its transformation.

So did the American Society of Interior Designers (ASID), which has just awarded Highlands Inn a first place in the historic renovation category of its 1984 Project Design Awards.

The ASID cited the inn for "its nice reflective details, wonderful use of colors and the clean, clear and lovely design motifs that follow throughout." Of particular pleasure to those involved with its renovation was the ASID praise for "the incredible transformation from its former state to the present design."

Will Shaw and Associates of Monterey was the architectural firm for the project. Interior design was directed by a San Francisco firm, Marquis Associates, and the new hotel logo was designed by Intrinsics, also of San Francisco.

ALIVE AND WELL

County Bank and Trust is alive and well — very well — in Carmel as well as in Santa Cruz County. That's the message in a report released by E. Reese Davis, chairman and president of Cobanco, Inc., the bank's parent company.

The report states that County Bank and Trust "achieved new milestones in growth and profitability for the six-month period ending June 30."

Including the resources and liabilities acquired earlier in the year from the former National Bank of Carmel, the total assets of County Bank and Trust are reported to be $463.2 million, a growth of 27.6 percent over the same time last year. Deposits, loans and leases and the shareholders' equity also increased substantially during the same 12-month period.

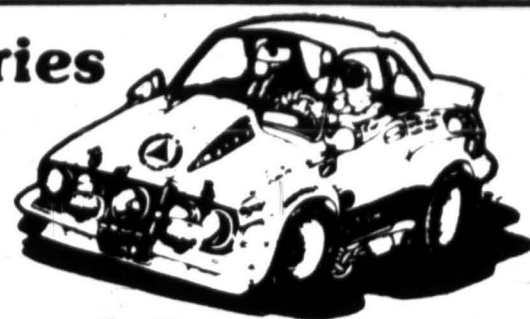

Perhaps of particular interest to local businesses, classified loans and other real estate totalled $13.3 million or 4.33 percent of total loans. "Reserves for possible loan losses stood at $2.8 million, an amount estimated to be sufficient to cover all known or anticipated loan losses.

"Considering a minor earnings drag created by the absorption of the Carmel operation, if trends continue, the year 1984 could be the best performance year in the 114-year history of County Bank and Trust," Davis said.

That certainly sounds like how to win friends and influence people. But this doesn't! The City of Carmel got a message — of sorts — from that same bank, one it may not have relished. It came in the form of an envelope stamped "Support Tourism."

He is the brother of Mrs. Jon A. Jensen (Lizz Sanford) of Carmel Bay, Mark J. Sanford and Byrne Sanford of Carmel. He is the director of the CAR Swim Center in Palo Alto.

The ceremony was performed by The Rev. James W. Brock and a cousin of the bride, William Youngdahl from Modesto. Maid of honor was Kit Russell of San Francisco, and attendants were Linda McClean of Santa Barbara and Mrs. Cal Herrick of Palo Alto.

Michael Irwin of Carmel was best man, and Todd Wasik of St. Louis and James MacLaughlin of Florida were the groomsmen.

The ushers were the brothers of the bride and groom and the brother-in-law of the groom — Brian Dahlquist, Eric Dahlquist, Mark J. Sanford, Byrne Sanford and Jon A. Jensen. After a honeymoon trip to the Napa Valley, they will live in Mountain View.

MARK SANFORD GRADUATES

Mark J. Sanford graduated from University of the Pacific with a B.A. in communicative disorders in May. He has been accepted to the graduate master's program at the University of Texas, Dallas, in audiology. He has been a cook at the Highlands Inn and the new Cafe Bayou this summer, and will leave in mid-August for Texas. His brother, Byrne Sanford, has completed his second year at Harvey Mudd College, where he studies electrical engineering. He has worked at the Carmel Valley Racquet Tennis Ranch this summer and will return to school in late August.

SCARDINA-GARDINER WEDDING

John Charles Gardiner, Jr., of Scottsdale, Ariz., and Natalie Marie Scardina of Carmel Valley were married Aug. 11 in St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church in Carmel Valley.

The bridegroom is the son of John Gardiner of Carmel Valley and the late Barbara Jane Gardiner, and is employed at his father's tennis ranch in Scottsdale.

The groom is the brother of Thomas Gardiner of Del Mar, Mrs. Dennis Kyger of Carmel Valley and Mrs. Clayton McKnight of Scottsdale.

Both the bride and groom attended Carmel High School. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Scardina and the sister of Peter Scardina — all of Carmel Valley.

The bride carried a cascade bouquet of ivory rosebuds, freesias and greenery and wore a full-length wedding gown of embroidered ivory silk. The ceremony was conducted by The Rev. James Brock.

Hospital needs blood donations

In addition to the usual summer shortage of blood at the Community Hospital Blood Center, there has been an unusually high demand for blood due to the number of emergency surgeries, said Dr. David A. Borucki, medical director of the center.

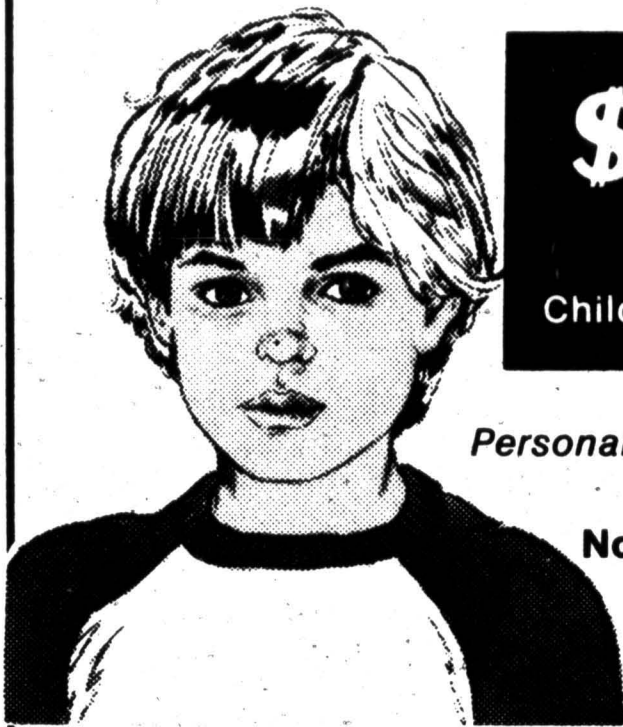

The Blood Center ordinarily can meet all local demands, Dr. Borucki said, but last week it had to request blood from Fort Ord to meet hospital demands on the peninsula.

Dr. Borucki encourages donors to call the Blood Center at 625-4814 to request an appointment for donating blood.

WILL GAHAGAN WINS MATCH

Will Gahagan of the Carmel Valley Racquet Club, playing the only men's 70s doubles event, won a deciding match against a top Canadian team in the recent Gordon Cup Trophy matches played in Portland, Ore. Paired with the team captain, 77-year-old Monte Ganger of Cleveland, Ohio, he defeated Jim Cox and Herb Gladstone, Vancouver, senior title holders in British Columbia, by a 3-6, 7-5, 6-2 margin.

Nineteen matches were played in this 36th competition, played alternately in Canada; and 12 Californians participated on a 28-man USA team, which included Bobby Riggs, who won in the 60s doubles. Final total score was a close 10-9 triumph for the United States.

Aug. 11 at the U.S. National Indoors Seniors tourney, Will once again got to the finals of the "combined ages-110" mixed doubles and lost to Bob Seller and top nationally-ranked Carol Bassi (35s), the S.F. Racquet Club pro, by a 6-3, 6-4 score. Will's partner was Bonnie Wagstaff of San Francisco. Last year, he won this event with LaNita Sanchez of San Francisco.

DEREK RAYNE "ROASTED" IN HOUSTON

A four-day "cluster" of dog shows was conducted at the Astrodome in Houston last weekend. Forty-one states were represented, with 14,000 entries considered by 30 judges. Derek Rayne of Carmel was the head judge for the Houston segment on Friday.

Prominent judges and dog experts from all over America attended, including the president of the American Kennel Club in New York, William Stiffel.

These experts, as well as officials of American kennel clubs, surprised Derek Rayne with a special "roast" in honor of his 45 years as a top dog show judge with an international reputation. Five of these men and women provided "this is your life" material on Rayne's background in this field. The affair ended with the presentation to Derek Rayne of a leather suitcase from England embossed with his name.

THE ISLAND of Mallorca in the Balearic Isles, an independent kingdom since 1229, had been united to the Spanish crown in 1479. Christianized as early as the first century after Jesus, Mallorcans customarily greeted one another with the words "Amar a Dios," a salutation subsequently made famous in faraway Alta California.

In the delightful climate of Mallorca, agriculture and stock raising flourished, delectable fruits were gathered, various kinds of fish were caught, orange, almond and olive trees abounded and grape vines grew in enormous quantities.

It was into this colorful and picturesque corner of the globe, at Petra de Mallorca, that Miquel Joseph Serra was born at 1 o'clock on the autumn morning of Nov. 24, 1713. (The Mallorcan Serre becomes Serra in Catalan and Sierra in Spanish. With a few exceptions, Junipero preferred and customarily used the Catalan spelling.)

Antonio and Margarita (Ferrer) Serra lived in a small stone home at 6 Calle Barracar, in the southeastern and oldest section of Petra. They were of common stock of the area, industrious farmers.

Neither of Serra's parents had any formal schooling. It was at home and in the fields, beside his parents, that Junipero learned something of the secrets of nature and dignity of labor.

In Mallorca, the fulfillment of the Christian duty to present the child for baptism was as swift as it was devout. Young Serra was brought to the parish church of Saint Peter's and christened there by Father Bartolome Llado as Miquel Joseph Serra.

The font where Serra was baptized was removed from the church in 1858 and for many years thereafter was used as an ornamental flower pot in the rectory garden. In modern times it was restored to a special chapel, with a plaque indicating its connection with Serra.

Visitors to Saint Peter's generally ask to see the Registro de Bautismos opened to Number 85 and the four-line entry for Miquel Joseph Serra. The parish priest eagerly points out the year 1713 as a special "blessing" for Mallorcans.

Returning to the Serra home, the god-parents handed the baby to his mother, with the words: "We return him to you a Christian." As soon as she was able, Margarita herself went to Saint Peter's for the "churching" of mother and child.

And, if she followed another tradition of Petra, she took the first opportunity to ascend to the mountain-top shrine of Bon
Any, there to dedicate the youngster to the Mother of God.

It was the practice in those times for infants to be presented for confirmation on the occasion of the local bishop's next visitation to the parish. On May 20, 1715, Bishop Atanasio de Esterripa administered the sacrament to Miquel Joseph.

These were the humble beginnings of the man who one day would add a realm to the Catholic Church and a coastline to the Spanish empire.

Car buffs gather for dream weekend

Ferraris, Hill honored at Seca

A CELEBRATION of Ferrari and a tribute to Phil Hill, America's first World Driving Champion, distinguish the 11th Monterey Historic Automobile Races. The races are scheduled Friday through Sunday, Aug. 24-26, at Laguna Seca Raceway.

The weekend, the most prestigious vintage car event in the country today, has drawn an entry of 300 cars, 75 of which will be Ferraris. As part of a special display, there will be the first Ferrari and also the first Ferrari to win the 24 Hours of LeMans.

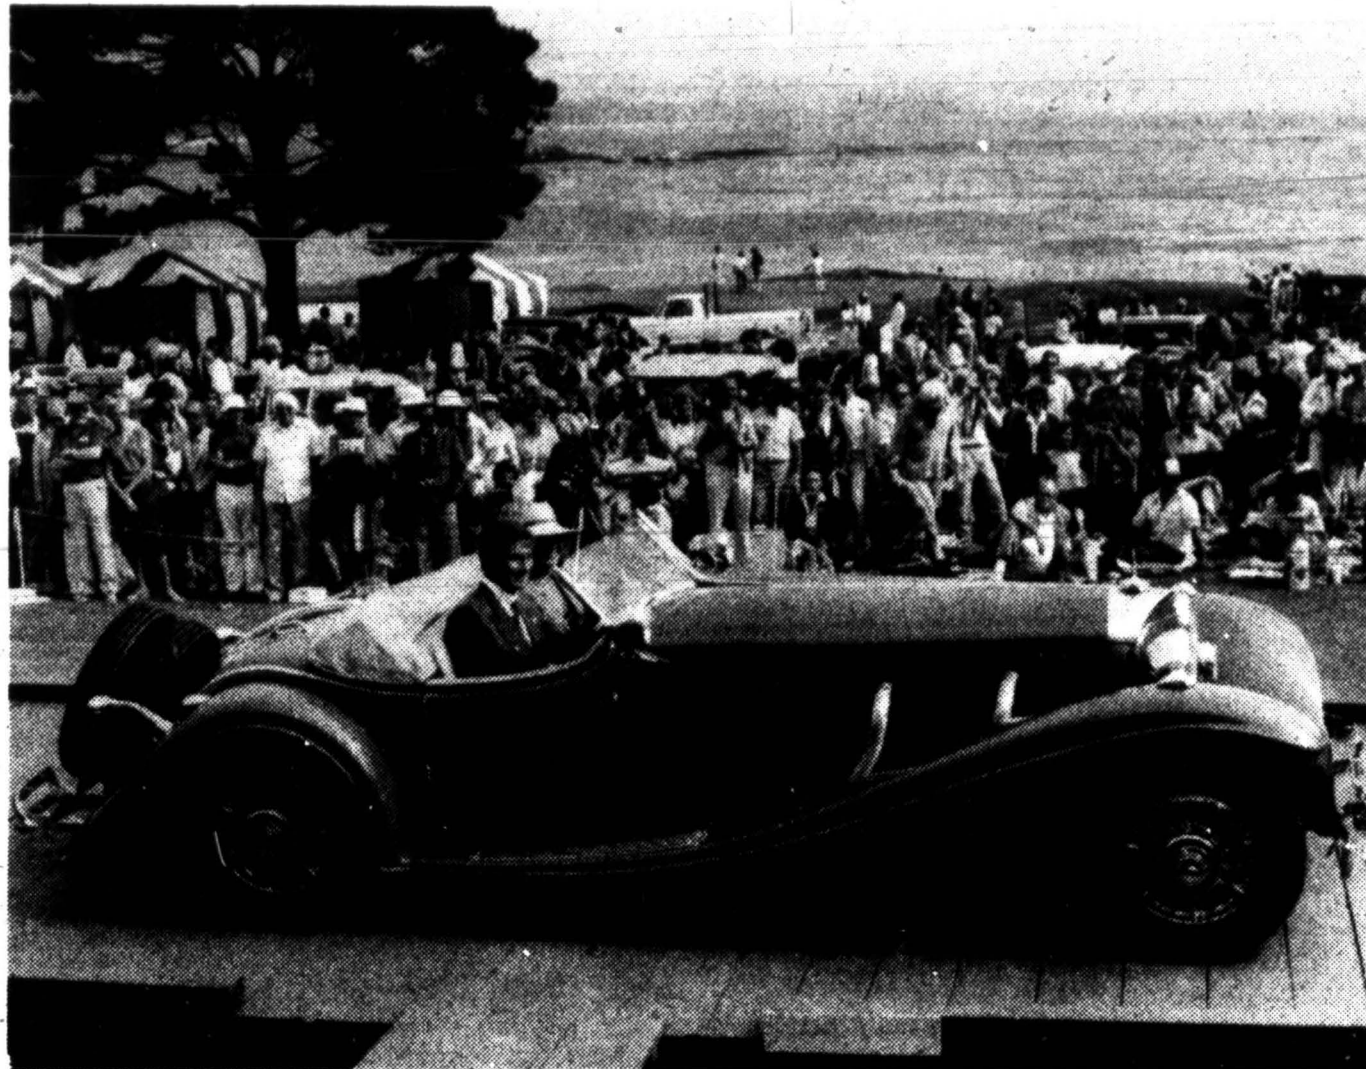

Friday will be reserved for practice at the circuit, located halfway between Monterey and Salinas on Highway 68. The cars have been divided into 13 racing groups and they will practice Aug. 24 by group from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

There will be seven races Saturday, starting at 1 p.m. Warm-ups for those classes of vehicles will begin at 9 a.m. Sunday, the six remaining divisions will begin racing at 1:30 p.m., following warm-ups, which will start at 9:45 a.m.

Special demonstrations will take place at 11 a.m. Saturday and at 11:45 a.m. Sunday on the 1.9-mile, nine-turn Laguna Seca Raceway circuit.

There are 15 cars entered in the Sunday event for Can-Am cars, vintage 1966 through 1972, and a whopping 26 cars entered in Sunday's FIA Makes Championship Cars class. Those will be the final races of the weekend, scheduled at 3:40 and 4:10 p.m.

All cars will be competing for the

TOM PERKINS, shown in his 1935 Mercedes Benz on the winner's ramp, will show this year his 1934 Squire Vanden Plas Roadster.

Awards are sponsored by Sears Roebuck and Company.

Ferrari, the honored manufacturer, is the single most famous name in motor racing history. The fabled red cars from Northern Italy have a history which is unmatched. The glittering history includes 5,000 race victories and 25 world championships.

The driver roster is as noteworthy. It boasts such names as Ascari, Fangio, Farina, Hawthorn, Gregory, VonNeumann, Shelby, Ginther, Moss, Lovely, Gurney, Graham Hill, Pabst, Surtees, Bandini, Rodriguez, Ickx, Amon, Regazzoni, Lauda, Reutemann, Andretti, Villeneuve, Tambay, Scheckter, Arnoux and others.

Included in the array of drivers who have represented Ferrari is Santa Monica's Phil Hill. Hill started his racing career like many other drivers in the 1950s. His first car was an MG/TC. In 1950, shortly after competing in his first race in Santa Ana, Hill drove a Jaguar XK 120 to victory on the tree-lined Pebble Beach circuit.

The Pebble Beach road course evolved into Laguna Seca Raceway, as history has shown, and Hill evolved into one of America's greatest drivers. He won the 24 Hours of LeMans three times — 1958, 1961 and 1962.

He won Sebring three times, too, in 1958, 1959 and 1961 and became world champion in 1961 in Formula-One racing.

Hill came to join Ferrari after being observed by United States importer Luigi Chinetti, who will also be at Laguna Seca for the Historic Automobile Races.

Chinetti invited Hill to join the Ferrari Works team. The observation by Chinetti paid off. Hill drove a 250 Mille Miglia to victory in the Pebble Beach road race in 1952 and a Testa Rosa 250 to a win at Sebring in 1958. Hill will race both of those cars at Laguna Seca next weekend.

Hill raced other machines, too, including Jim Hall's Chaparral in the 1966 Can-Am Series and won his last victory in 1967, teaming with Jackie Stewart and Chris Amon in a Ferrari to capture the 6 Hours at Brands Hatch in England.

Chinetti was no slouch as a driver either. He was responsible for creating Ferrari in America. He was an ex-factory driver, win-

34th Concours this Sunday

THE ROMANCE of the automobile will be celebrated Sunday, Aug. 26, as the 34th Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance comes to The Lodge at Pebble Beach.

Approximately 90 percent of the vintage cars, lovingly maintained, have never been to Pebble Beach before, according to Concours co-chairmen Lorin Tryon and Jules Heumann. Close to 50 percent of the 125 contenders will be from out of the state and country.

John Wheatley of Tulsa, Okla., will show his 1938 Mercedes Benz 540K Sindelfingen Cabriolet. Built for an Italian nobleman before World War II, it was hidden behind a bricked-up wall in a garage until the war ended. It has less than 20,000 original miles.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tickets are $12 each and can be purchased at all Pebble Beach gates the day of the show. Net proceeds are donated to charity.

ing LeMans in 1932 and 1934. His victory in 1949 in a two-liter Ferrari was a first for the Italian company. Chinetti's last stint came as an owner of a team, which in 1965 included drivers Masten Gregory and Jochen Rindt.

Camping will remain available on a first-come, first-served basis at $9 per night, either Friday or Saturday.

Tickets for the 11th Monterey Historic Automobile Races are available now. Ticketron and BASS outlets have tickets, or they may be ordered by telephone from the Laguna Seca Office at 373-1811, weekdays between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. In Carmel, tickets may also be purchased at For Car Buffs Motor Boutique, the Crossroads, Rio Road off Highway 1.

The ticket prices are $7 for Friday and $15 for either Saturday or Sunday. There is a three-day advance sale ticket priced at $30 and a Saturday/Sunday combo ticket with an advance price of $25.

Entire county invited to this Family Reunion

IT WILL be one family reunion that everyone is invited to as the 48th annual Monterey County Fair opens Tuesday, Aug. 28. "Family Reunion" is the theme of the multi-faceted festivities, to take place at the Monterey Fairgrounds and Exposition Park, Fairgrounds and Garden roads, Monterey.

"It's a time for families to get together and have fun," said Lou Rudolph, general manager of the fairgrounds.

More than 50 entertainment acts have been signed to fill four stages throughout the run of the fair, which continues until Sunday, SPEEDY portraits are a popular feature of the Fair.

Sept. 2. Other highlights are the traditional produce exhibits and displays of work by local winners in such categories as photography, fine arts and crafts and children's art.

Fairgoers can view a new addition to the fair animal roster this year at the fancy chickens exhibit. Other creatures on display include prize cows, goats, horses, rabbits, pigs, sheep, dogs, lambs and ponies.

The Butler Carnival will return, and will remain open an extra day after the fair ends Sept. 2.

From appetizers through dessert, a wide variety of food concessions will be open at the fairgrounds. Many are operated by local service groups, such as the Soroptimists of Carmel Bay (wine coolers) and Congregation Beth Israel (lox and bagels).

Along the midway will be the traditional booths that display everything from health aids to needlecraft kits. During a brief stroll the fairgoer can test the water in a hot tub, meet a deputy sheriff's dog, buy a bowling ball or register to vote.

Monterey-Salinas Transit will operate four bus routes at night during the county fair to test the potential of operating late service. The transit company will operate other rider promotions during fair time. For details, see separate story.

It all begins at 8 a.m. Tuesday, Aug. 28, at Opening Day Breakfast, served by the Monterey Kiwanis.

Ticket prices for the 48th annual Monterey County Fair are: adults, $3.50; seniors and military, $2.50; youths six to 12 years, $2; children up to age six, free. A Family Plan Pass is available for $10. With this pass, up to six family members may enter together.

Western Stage finishes 10th ambitious season

By ANNE PAPINEAU

SOWN A decade ago, the seeds of a semi-professional regional theater took root in a place known more for row crops than repertory.

And it is with a touch of weariness that artistic director Ron Danko reviews the cultivation and fruition of the Western Stage Summer Theatre, housed in the theater complex at Hartnell College in Salinas.

"It's been a slow sort of evolution, really," Danko said of this dynamic decade at Hartnell. Spawned from the junior college drama curriculum in 1975, the Western Stage now boasts a $360,000 budget for its summer season of full-blown musicals, dramas and classics.

Designers, actors and technicians apply in the hundreds from throughout the west for the opportunity to gain experience in one of the three theaters that comprise the Western Stage.

For the 10th anniversary season, Danko, Western Stage general manager Stan Crane and production manager Mark Shilstone mapped out a 10-show summer. Their goal would have been realized if not for the difficulty of obtaining scripts to a Spanish-language version of John Steinbeck's poignant, Of Mice and Men.

"It's only been done in Mexico City and Brazil," Danko noted.

Nonetheless, Western Stage audiences can view a summer season of a scope rarely tackled outside major cities.

"The other night we had 140 seeing Of Mice and Men in the Choral Auditorium. There were 110 in the Studio Theatre to see Foxfire, and 400 were in the Main Theatre for The Sound of Music."

Also playing in repertory are Terra Nova, the story of the race to the South Pole; the celebrated musical Fiddler on the Roof; Shakespeare's Richard III; Broadway, a '20s gangster sendup and The Rivals, a restoration play by Richard Sheridan. Arsenic and

Old Lace, that comedic look at murder and mayhem, opened the season, as it did one decade ago.

RON DANKO, artistic director of the Western Stage at Hartnell College in Salinas, said he is ready to turn the company over to another leader.

NEARLY 200 people staff the Western Stage this year. Approximately 50 are actors and actresses who auditioned at locations as far away as San Diego, Sacramento and Berkeley.

Although it utilizes trained performers and designers who receive stipends and, if they wish, college credit, the Western Stage is not a union company like California Repertory Theatre in Pacific Grove.

"We hired a couple of Equity people in the

Psychic healing classes

IT IS NOT too late to register for Adolphine Carol's classes in psychic healing and meditation intensive, which will continue at the Cherry Foundation 7:30 p.m. to 10 p.m. Tuesdays, and 10:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Wednesdays.

Adolphine Carol is an intuitive counselor, healer and teacher who has a private psychic counseling practice in Carmel. Her course stresses the ability to develop one's innate intuitive nature which, she says, is what being psychic is all about.

The seven-week intensive will cover grounding, centering, channeling the life force energy, maintaining your space, the aura and chakras, self-healing and healing others. The techniques are designed to be simple and effective.

After graduating from the Berkeley Psychic Institute in 1977, Adolphine Carol has concentrated in helping others get in touch with their greater potential through readings, healings, classes and workshops.

Author and psychotherapist Edwin Clark, in his book The Myth of the Great Secret, says: "Adolphine has an open-minded approach to the psychic world. She taught us to be aware of ourselves not merely as bodies in space and time but as energy beings, in fact, able to move in time by means of memory and anticipation; in space by way of imagination; and in consciousness by visualization and intentionality."

The fee for the seven-week psychic healing and meditation intensive is $100, and all participants are requested to pre-register by calling 624-6019.

"Funny Stuff," an afternoon of poetry reading, will take place at Cherry Hall at 2 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 26. English language light and funny verse will be read by Bonnie Gartshore, poet, teacher and journalist, and by Jane Wilgress, director of the Cherry Foundation.

Both have had a lifelong fascination with humorous verse, and selections will be spread over the centuries, from the Romans to Ogden Nash. Everyone is welcome, and a donation in the basket will be welcome too. For reservations, call 624-7491.

Maxine Jennings of Carmel and Celia Leker of Monterey have joined the board of directors of the Carl Cherry Foundation.

MPC Fort Ord will register

Registration is now underway for the Fall I term at Monterey Peninsula College Fort Ord Campus. It will continue through Thursday, Aug. 30 at the MPC Fort Ord Office on Division Hill Road, Fort Ord.

Mime performances benefit preschoolers in Big Sur

MIME. What comes to mind when you hear that word...white face, silent acting, clowning? Tara Evans will share her definition of mime, its varieties from white face classical style to use of masks and body masks, in a benefit performance for the Apple Pie Preschool in Big Sur.

Tara studied theater arts at Monterey Peninsula College and became interested in expression through movement. There she took classes with mime artist Jan Kessler. Moving to Los Angeles she continued studying mime with Richard Shepard. She became a member of the Richmond Shepard Mime Troupe and performed with them throughout Los Angeles at theaters and colleges for four years.

Also participating in the mime show is Tara's mother, Helen Morgenrath. Helen has long studied and taught movement of many types, ranging from East Indian Bharata Natyam to improvisational modern dance. Her interest in the Eastern philosophies and life styles led her to study Kyogen with Yuriko Doi in San Francisco.

This is a benefit performance for the Big Sur Apple Pie Preschool, which has been in existence for more than a year. Started by local Big Sur parents, the Apple Pie Preschool is a co-operative school and has been providing a great service to working parents.

The program is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Friday, Aug. 24 and Saturday, Aug. 25 in the Grange Hall, approximately 26 miles south of Carmel. Tickets are $4 for adults, $1 for children. Watch for the signs along Highway 1.

Skaters collect for 'Jerry's Kids'

A 10-hour Jerry Lewis Skate-a-Thon to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association will take place at Del Monte Gardens in Monterey Sunday, Aug. 26.

"We wanted to give something back to the community," said Manuel Lopez, owner of Del Monte Gardens, "and the Skate-a-Thon for MDA was something everyone could get involved in. It's a chance for people to have fun and do something for a good cause."

The Skate-a-Thon, co-sponsored by the Roller Skating Rink Operators Association and MDA, will give skaters a chance to exercise, win prizes and help in the fight against neuromuscular diseases. This is the 12th consecutive year Del Monte Gardens has been involved in the Jerry Lewis Skate-a-Thon, with donations totaling $48,500 during that time. There is still time to sign up.

Skaters will ask for tax-deductible contributions that will allow MDA to continue funding a national network of free medical services and a worldwide research program that includes more than 750 individual projects in medical schools, laboratories, hospitals and universities in the United States and abroad. This revenue will also support 10 major MDA research/clinical centers at leading universities.

Last year, about three-quarters of MDA's funds were allocated to program services, which include research, patient and community services, professional education and training and public health education. This money provides free medical services, treatment and diagnosis for people of all ages who are handicapped by any of the 40 neuromuscular diseases dealt with by the association. MDA offers diagnosis at more than 230 MDA clinics and supplies patients with many other direct services, including the provision of orthopedic aids, recreation at summer and winter camps and transportation assistance.

MDA has one of the best records of fiscal management of any voluntary health agency with approximately one-fifth of its income spent on fund-raising, and only 5 percent on management and general expenses.

THEATER REVIEW

BY JOANNE TENENBAUM

An endearing French farce

STAPLES OF the French farce — a popular and enduring theatrical tradition — are sexual intrigue lightly treated, a plethora of comic types, non-stop action based on confusion, slapstick comedy and beautiful women, tantalizingly displayed.

Georges Feydeau's A Flea In Her Ear has them all, and the Monterey Peninsula College players make the most of them.

Adapted by Suzanne Grossman and Paxton Whitehead and directed by Peter Nyberg, a veteran of television, film, and major professional theater, MPC's A Flea In Her Ear transcends the limits of college, or even community theater. Flea's two sets are richly furnished, and the second is mechanically sophisticated. The turn-of-the-century costuming is also elaborate. For the most part, the performers live up to the promise of all this spectacle.

The household of Victor Emmanuel Chandebeise, an insurance company president, is a little offbeat in the first place. First there is his Gracie Burns sort of wife, who, despite her great love for her husband, is terminally bored.

"Who could have thought living happily ever after could be so boring," she muses wistfully to a friend. "I've often thought of taking a lover just to create a misery or two."

Then there is Victor's nephew Camille, who is perfectly normal except that he can pronounce only vowels. ("Ow ah ooh?" he asks a visitor.) And Antoinette, the cook and wife of the butler, who is carrying on with Camille. And there is Dr. Finache, a streetwise physician and confidante to Victor, and Jacques Tournel, a business associate and the stock fop, who is wooing Victor's wife, Raymonde. And that's just the opening situation.

Then Raymonde spots a package in her husband's mail that, coupled with his indifference in the bedroom, puts the flea of infidelity in her marital ear. Determined to catch Victor in the act, Raymonde prevails upon an old friend, Lucienne, to send Victor a billet doux, inviting him to a tryst at a hotel of ill repute, The Lanturne Rouge.

of the ensuing complications are laid, moves too slowly.

But acts two and three make up for it in spades, with fast and furious comic action to which last Saturday night's big audience responded enthusiastically.

Paul Gaucher is hilarious as Camille, establishing his character with great economy and maintaining it with perfect consistency. His vowels-only emphatic speech and frustrated mannerisms are a red ribbon of laughter that winds through every part of the play.

As Raymonde and her friend Lucienne, respectively, Gwyneth Hovick and Lavonne Rae Andrews are fine. Hovick's dizzy blonde is a delight, and Andrews's Spanish confidante is her match.

Both actresses have created delightful characters, and they play very smoothly together. Andrews' part also calls for her to speak Spanish to her choleric gauchito husband (Keith Decker), and this, too, she manages well.

Keith Decker's broad caricature of the jealous macho husband is quite funny, absolutely correct linguistically (Castilian Spanish accent), but sometimes hard to understand. ("That would be athathination," he declares.)

Stephen Moorers's Tournel is the essence of foppiness, and Phil Pratt's laconic manner blends well with the character of Dr. Finache. In smaller bits, Julia Jetter decorates the stage with her adorable characterization of a hotel parlormaid, and Michael McKovic's quick sketch of a randy Scotsman in kilts is well drawn.

As Pinouf, the concierge of the Lanturne Rouge, Jay Lasnik's timing is off. He rushes through some of his funniest lines, and cannot seem to relax into the irascible behavior his part requires.

Most challenging assignment, perhaps, is Bill Lindsay's double role as Victor Emmanuel and as the jumpish hotel porter, Poche. Oddly enough, Lindsay is more convincing as Poche than he is as Victor Emmanuel, but he is adequate in both parts.

French farce is an unpretentious medium — no deep messages, no major themes. It is meant to titillate, delight and amuse, and A Flea In Her Ear does this. At $6 a seat, this is a theatrical best buy that adults and children alike will enjoy.

Bird lovers "flock" to Decoy Gallery

Beautifully detailed wood carvings, pewter miniatures, fine watercolors, notepaper, glassware — even fine English bone china — all emblazoned with waterfowl, gamebirds and songbirds, abound at the lovely Decoy Gallery on the Ocean Avenue level of Carmel Plaza.

Treat yourself to a quick tour around the spacious gallery; you'll be astonished at how many items bear bird motifs! And if the man in your life just happens to be a sportsman, this is the most perfect place to find a gift for any occasion!

The gallery takes its name from genuine duck decoys which repose in a special corner in the shop. Antique decoys, which may cost in excess of $2,000, became an important collector's item some years ago when the prestigious Park-Bernet Galleries first began to auction them as folk art.

Decoys that were carved on the East Coast from the 1900s to 1932 are most sought after because they were carved by "market hunters," according to gallery owner Bill Toth. Signed decoys by known carvers, those still bearing the original paint and species that were not carved in large numbers are the rarest and most valuable, Bill explains.

Should you want to try your hand at carving a duck decoy, there are basic decoy forms in solid wood just waiting for your embellishment, or do-it-yourself decoy kits, plus paints, a complete line of carving tools and a rather comprehensive library of how-to books.

Watercolorist Jim Killen and William Tyner are among the fine artists represented at the Decoy Gallery.

Salinas houses summer repertory success story

past," Danko recalled. "It was just too expensive for us."

Danko instead describes the Western Stage as "laboratory experience" for rising theater talents. The grounding they receive resembles a veritable three-ring circus, as nine shows open and rotate in repertory for a dozen weeks.

The Western Stage involves Carmel and Carmel Valley residents in a variety of capacities — as actors, actresses, and professionals, Danko said. Stephen Tosh of Carmel Valley, for example, was music director for JOE YEDLIKA portrays the childlike Lennie and Mark Shilstone-Laurent is George in John Steinbeck's Of Mice and Men at the Western Stage.

Fiddler on the Roof. Many subscribers also live in Carmel, Carmel Valley, and Big Sur.

"Besides making theater available to this area," Danko said, "we provide summer employment to actors and designers — which is very crucial. They are people who have their B.F.A. or M.F.A. in fine arts. The summer is sort of a transition period before they go out in the fall. Here they have a chance to work with top-notch artists and designers."

"If you have good people, which we do, it makes it a lot easier," Danko said. "Everyone feels a tremendous amount of pressure."

The pressure is such that — its ambitious anniversary year aside — The Western Stage will return to a smaller format next season. "We'll go back to seven shows," he said.

The Western Stage employs no understudies and actors, true to repertory tradition, perform two to four roles. This makes for a busy summer as performers rehearse in the mornings and afternoons and perform in the evenings, Danko pointed out.

"There was an accident and we had to have somebody learn the lines in 24 hours for Broadway," he said. "And the gal did it."

"I didn't direct any shows this year," said Danko, who has both directed and acted in seasons past. "This year I'm overseeing and trying to do a little bit of everything. My role is to be always besieged by people and problems."

Although the weariness crops up in his voice, Danko expresses pride in the progress of the theater company.

"I think we set a general tone for theater. I think because of the Western Stage there has been a general improvement in the quality of theater on the peninsula. We use a number of actors and actresses from the peninsula and give them scholarships."

DANKO ALSO credited constructive

reciprocity with California Repertory Theatre for upping the standards of both companies. "A lot of people have heard of the Western Stage through Cal Rep, and we've hired people who worked at Cal Rep."

Danko said years ago there was some resentment among community theater members when the Western Stage auditioned performers from out of the area. "Then they realized they could learn something," Danko said of these locals. "There's nothing worse than community theater based on ego where community people constantly play the same roles and never grow. That's theater at its worst."

In its 10th year, the Western Stage appears stable enough for the artistic director to entertain thoughts of departure.

"I have definite plans to leave," explained Danko from his photo-lined office. "In spring we auditioned 600 actors. I don't want to continue to audition 600 actors every spring."

engage in a foolish duel, in the Western Stage production of Richard Sheridan's The Rivals.

You feel you're doing the same thing. Everyone needs a change after a while.

"I will slowly fade out. I will not be here for the start of the next summer. I will travel and teach during the school year."

Danko said the Western Stage has "reached a point where it's pretty well locked in. We can't make any more tremendous strides."

Is that a spark in the eyes of the artistic director?

"I may go somewhere in two years and just start this all over."

The 10th anniversary season of the Western Stage concludes Sunday, Aug. 26. Final performances will be of Broadway at 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday; Foxfire at 8 p.m. Thursday; Terra Nova at 8 p.m. Friday; Richard III at 8 p.m. Saturday; The Rivals at 8 p.m. Saturday; Fiddler on the Roof at 2 p.m. Sunday and Arsenic and Old Lace at 8 p.m. Sunday. Classic roadsters paid tribute at Shell Fisher's CLASSIC CARS are the subject of a new exhibit at Shell Fisher's Gallery that depicts automobiles in paint, glass and ink.

A special "Concours d'Elegance" showing is planned from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 23 through Monday, Aug. 27 at the gallery, San Carlos Street near Fifth Avenue, Carmel. A variety of artists is represented.

Native Californian Christopher Cross is a photorealistic painter. His interest in classic cars began six years ago. His works are featured in museums as well as private collections and have garnered numerous awards. Cross received his master's degree in painting and his B.A. in graphic design, both from San Jose State University.

THE FERRARI emblem is captured in stained glass by Barry Austen at Shell Fisher's Gallery, San Carlos near Fifth, Carmel.

Barry Austen is a local artist who as a child attended special classes sponsored by the Detroit Board of Education at the Detroit Museum of Art. He later attended the Cranbrook Institute for the Arts in Bloomfield Hills, Mich. Austen was an award recipient of the Fisher Body Craftsman Guild, has exhibited his work nationally and has been featured in several international stained glass publications.

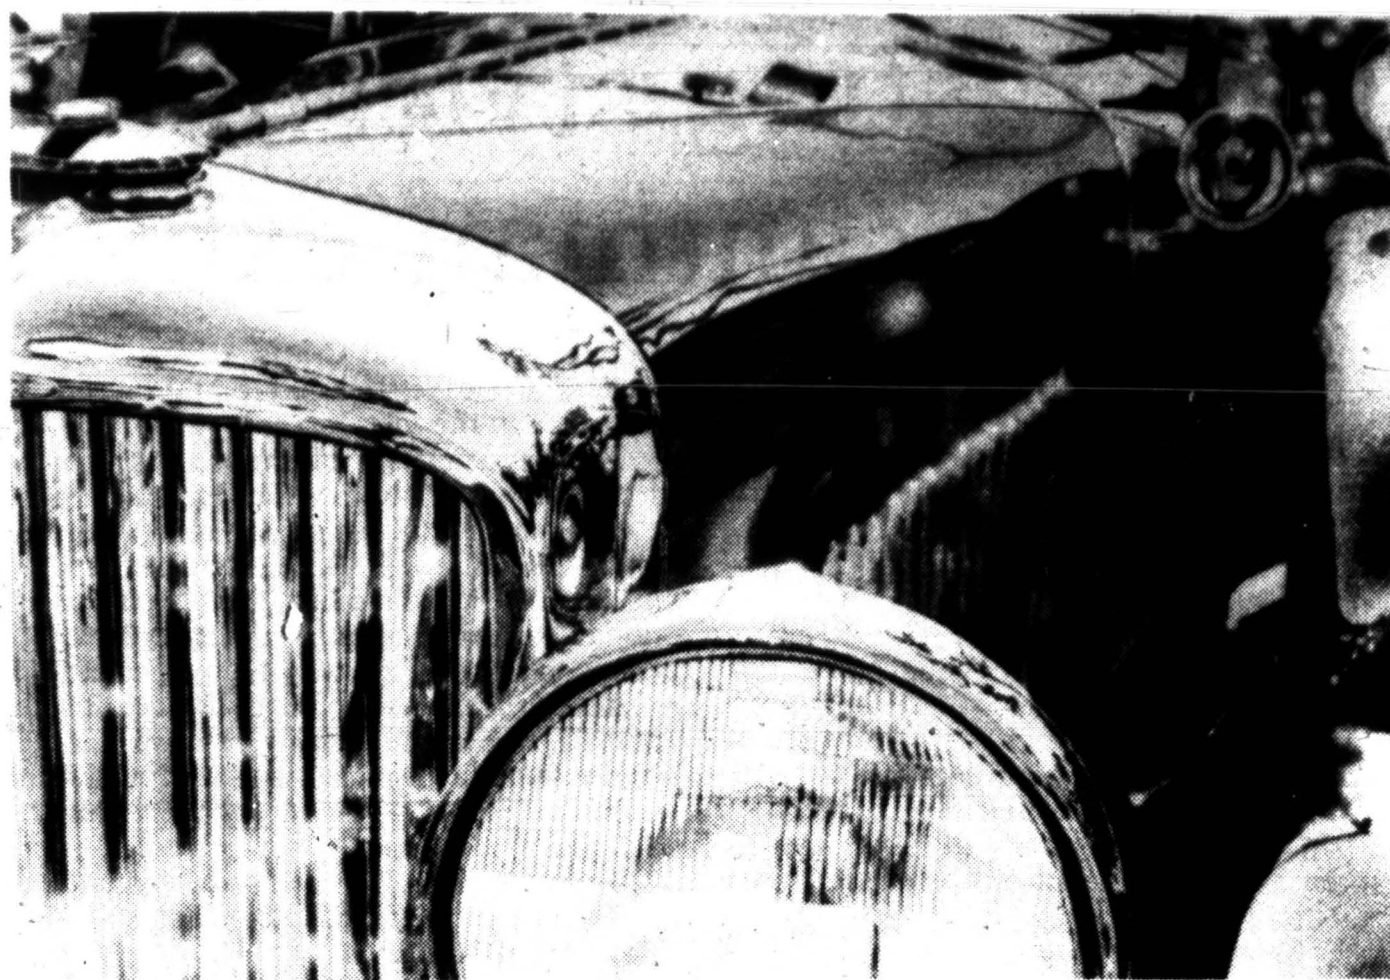

A photorealism effect in watercolors and acrylics is captured by Nancy Graham. Her formal education includes a B.A. and M.F.A. in art from Eastern Illinois University. She received a four-year Talented Student Award Scholarship and Allerton Federated Art School Scholarship. She has had several solo shows and her paintings are in private collections throughout the country.

Roy Dryer is a Northern California artist who completed his undergraduate work at the College of San Mateo and San Francisco State University. He also studied at Sacramento State University and the University of California at Davis. Although he enjoys working in all media, Dryer prefers watercolor and pen and ink to express his compositions.

Local artist David Faulkner was reared in New Mexico. He received his B.F.A. at the University of New Mexico. He began car illustrations about eight years ago and his work has been seen in leading magazines and automotive books. He has completed several covers for Motorbook International.

Tom Morton grew up in a household of artists and had his first showing at age six. His painting of a bright red fire truck was classified as outstanding and marked the beginning of his artistic career. His automotive art is intensely detailed, right down to the personalized license plate.

For additional information about this show, call 625-3007.

1933 DUESENBERG J Dual Cowl Phaeton, a photorealistic watercolor by Nancy Graham, can be viewed at Shell Fisher's Gallery, San Carlos near Fifth, Carmel.

Contrasting styles mark newest Zantman exhibit

TWO ARTISTS of radically different styles will be represented at the Zantman Art Galleries, Sixth Avenue at Mission Street, Carmel. A reception for the works of Don Clausen and Jan Van Rijsewijk is planned from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 25, at Zantman.

Clausen's abstract expressionistic works, large paintings in deep glowing reds, blacks, grays and whites, are in the collections of many commercial enterprises as well as individuals. Although the artist indicates how he intended the paintings to hang, owners often hang them another way to suit their taste and space.

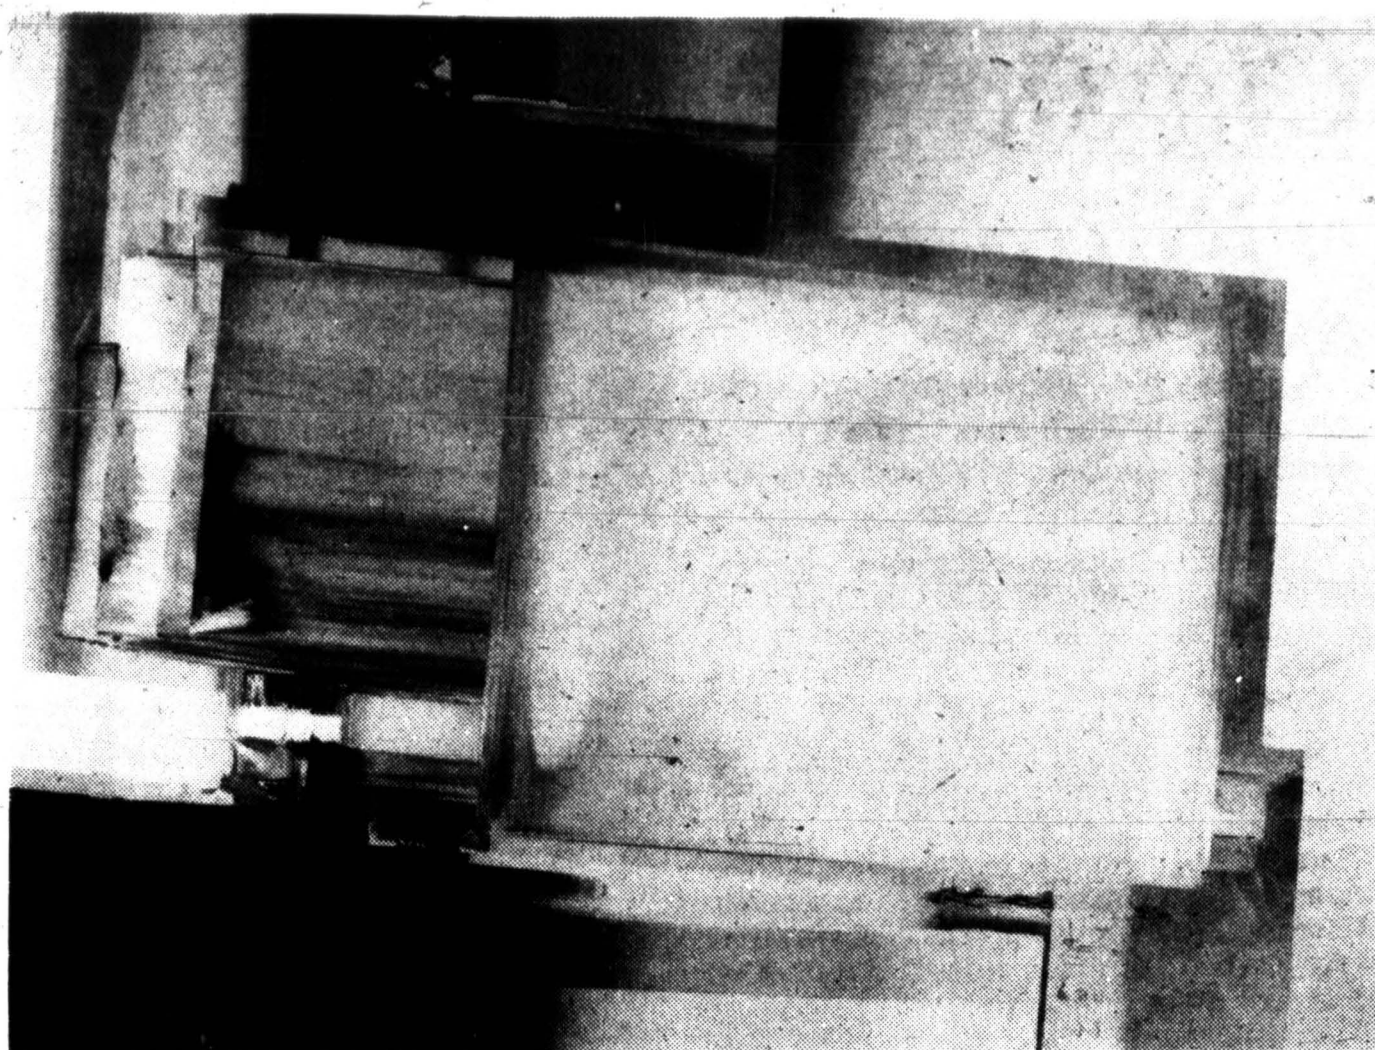

The artist is a graduate of the California

College of Arts and Crafts. Clausen said he prefers to leave the interpretation of his abstracts to the viewer.

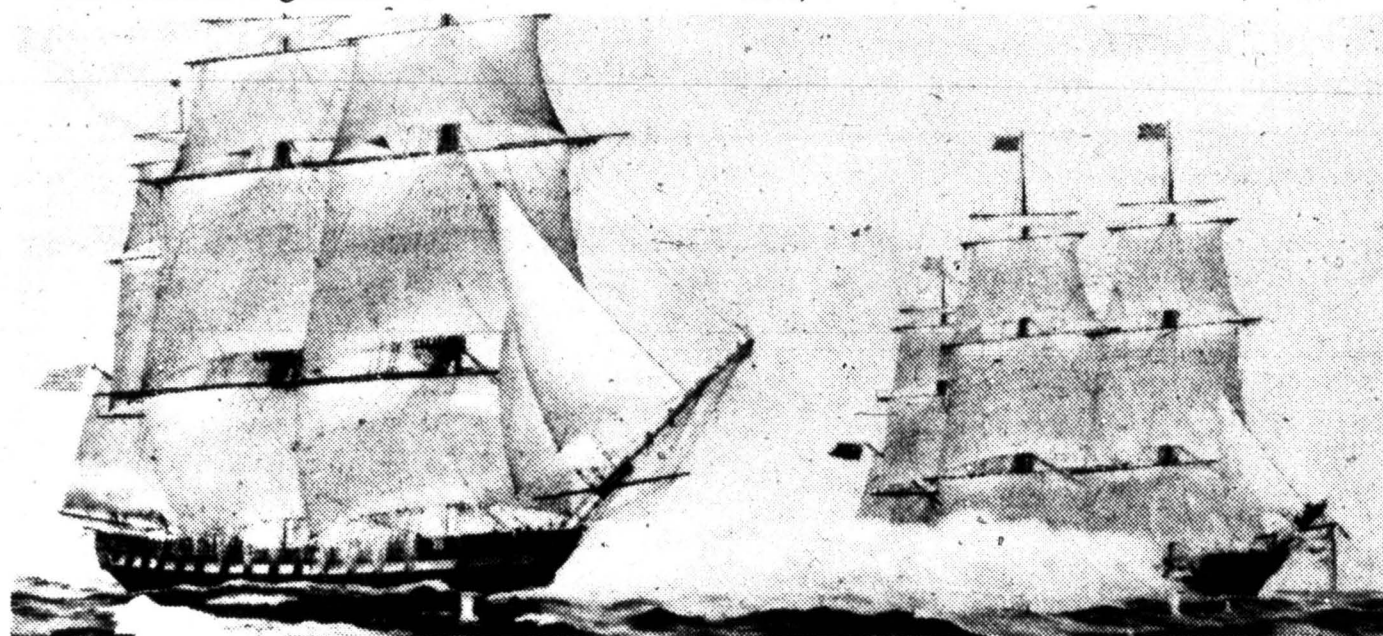

Moody paintings of landscapes, harbor scenes and little old towns in Holland are executed by Dutch artist Johannes Cornelis (Jan) Van Rijsewijk. Born in the Netherlands in 1928, the artist studied graphics at the National Academy of Art in Amsterdam. His first exhibit took place in Hull, England.

After he returned to his native country, his paintings became widely known in the Netherlands as well as in Scandinavia and Canada. He is a devotee of the Haagse School of painting.

There are two Zantman Art Galleries on Sixth Avenue in Carmel. For more information, call 624-8314.
